CONFESSED HER CRIME

Her Last Act An Effort to Save Her Husband's Life—Declares Him Innocent in Signed Statement — Five Women Witness Execution.

AUBURN, N. Y., March 29.—Mrs. Mary Farmer was executed in the electric chair at Auburn prison at 6:15 a. m. today for the murder of Mrs. Sarah Brennan, an aged neighbor, whom she killed to secure her property.

Five women and a score of men witnessed the execution.

Before going to the death chamber Mrs. Farmer gave to the Rev. J. J. Hickey, her spiritual adviser, a signed confession completely exonerating her husband, who is now confined in Auburn prison under sentence of death for complicity in the same crime.

Mrs. Farmer's confession reads:

Auburn, N. Y., March 28, 1909.

To Rev. J. J. Hickey:

My husband, James D. Farmer, never had any hand in Sarah Brennan's death, nor never knew anything about it until the trunk was opened. I never told him anything that had happened. I feel he has been terribly wronged. James D. Farmer was not at home the day the affair happened, neither did James D. Farmer ever put a hand on Sarah Brennan after her death. Again I wish to say as strongly as I can that my husband, James D. Farmer, is entirely innocent of the death of Sarah Brennan, that he knowingly had no part in any plans that led to it, and that he knew nothing whatever about it.

MARY H. FARMER.

JOHNSON'S $5,000 UP TO FIGHT

NEW YORK, March 29.—Jack Johnson made the rounds of the Park Row newspaper offices to-day, and while in the office of the New York Journal posted $5,000. "This is to let Mr. Jeffries see that I mean business," said the champion, "and is only to go as a wager in case we agree to box."

NEW YORK, March 29.—Forty-second street in the neighborhood of the Grand Central Station was like a sea of ink lashed by a storm to-day when Jack Johnson, champion heavyweight of the wild, arrived on the Twentieth Century limited from Chicago. When a heavy train of Pullmans snorted into the station the crowd of nearly 10,000 people, mostly negroes, surged over the ropes that had been stretched by the police of the East Fifty-first street station, and at the appearance of the champion there was a yell of triumph.

Johnson and his wife left the last car of the train. Outside of the members of his party there were no other passengers in that car, the New York Central officials relieving the race line tautness by corralling the champion at the rear of the train and the white people being given the cars ahead.

"Here He Comes."

"There he is," yelled negroes, young and old, sporty and those that were not sporty, but proud of the big black fighter as one of their race. All of the railroad police and detectives and ten men from the city force were necessary to keep Johnson from being mobbed by his admirers. He and his wife, George Lytle and his wife, "Sig" Curley and his wife, Abe Attell, the fighter's manager, and P. J. Casey made up the party.

A big reception committee of negroes received the champion. Outside of the station were twelve big sightseeing automobiles filled with colored humanity, in one of them a band played with a force that drowned the clatter and crash of shifting trains and engines. Before he took the automobile for the Cafe Wilkins, where he is to make his headquarters, the champion talked with the newspaper men.

"I will deposit $5,000 with the Evening Journal," he said, "and anybody who wants to get a fight with me can cover it."

"Will you take on Jeffries?" he was asked.

"Let Jeffries Put Up."

"I will only be too glad to," he replied. "I will fight him as soon as he gives me the chance. I have kept in good condition and am ready at any time to fight to keep the championship. If Jeffries does not come across and meet the forfeit I shall place I will then let any other man take the chance.

"How about Corbett?"

"He or any other man."

"Isn't he too old?" was asked.

"He is not, and Ketchell isn't too small, either," he answered.

With the band playing, the automobiles were started west on Forty-second street in a triumphal parade to escort the negro fighter to his lodgings.

JORDAN SAYS "NOT GUILTY"

Chester Jordan, photographed to-day

Chester S. Jordan, accused of wife murder, arraigned to-day before Judge Edgar J. Sherman in the Middlesex County Superior Court in East Cambridge, pleaded not guilty.

The courtroom was jammed, and Jordan's aged father and his brother-in-law, Edward Kendall, were there to greet the accused man.

As indicated excusively in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, Jordan's lawyers moved that the indictment against him be quashed on the ground that it violated the bill of rights and also because the court lacked jurisdiction from the fact that the indicting Grand Jury was improperly drawn.

Judge Sherman overruled the motion to quash the indictment and told Attorney Harvey H. Pratt that he would also probably overrule the plea as to lack of jurisdiction. He told Jordan's attorneys and District Attorney John J. Higgins that both sides ought to be prepared to go to trial on April 20.

Pleads "Not Guilty."

Jordan was brought to the court room at 10:05 between two deputy sheriffs. He was not handcuffed. He was coolness and confidence personified. He smiled and was very cheerful in the court-room. When he raised his hand during the reading of the indictment he was perfectly calm, and when he said:

"Not guilty," his voice rang clear as a bell.

Attorney William F. S. Hart of New York, one of the big corps of counsel engaged by Jordan's brother-in-law, Jesse L. Livermore, the millionaire cotton manager, has withdrawn from the case. The reason for his doing so is unexplained.

General Charles A. Bartlett, Harvey H. Pratt and Jeremiah S. Sullivan of the law firm of Sullivan & Teeling, were at Jordan's counsel table to defend him.

When Attorney Harvey H. Pratt had made the two motions, one to quash the indictment and the other on the jurisdiction, Jordan asked that he be excused. He was allowed to go back to his jail cell.

Attorney Pratt then argued that the indictment was lacking in that it did not specify the crime and was only general, but specific, as required by Section 12 of the bill of rights.

Attorney Pratt declared that the indictment did not fully, plainly, substantially

BOMB HUNT!

O'Meara Leads Search for Dynamiter—Electric Lights and Constant Police Guard to Protect New Opera House.

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara today assumed personal charge of the hunt for the person or persons who conspired to blow up the new Boston Opera House by setting off a bomb under the walls on Saturday night.

Contractor George W. Harvey in a statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN strongly intimated that revenge was the motive for the plot. "And there was a motive," he added significantly.

A force of men was put to work to-day rigging a set of electric arc lights around the incompleted structure, to furnish additional facilities to the men who will guard the building from further explosions. The number of watchmen has been redoubled.

The work will be rushed to completion under a heavy guard night and day, and any person who appears around the work at night will be arrested for trespass.

Hire Private Detective.

Eben D. Jordan, the leader in the movement to give Boston the finest opera house in the country, personally inspected the wrecked corner to-day and expressed his indignation. Private detectives were put to work on the case to-day, and it is believed that Mr. Jordan hired them to cooperate with the police.

Builder Harvey says that there are several strong clews pointing to the perpetrators of the outrage. No expense will be spared, he says, to run down the guilty ones, and the work will go on as though nothing had happened.

Though he refused to state whom he suspected, the activity of the police and a number of private detectives who are assisting the workmen on the job indicates that they believe someone engaged in the construction work may be arrested.

Mr. Harvey also took occasion to deny the printed report that he had received letters threatening him with death, and stating that he feared he would be assassinated. He said:

By Contractor Harvey.

We have several detectives at work on the case, in addition to the city police. This is a very serious matter, and we intend to clear it up.

There are several clews in our possession which we believe will lead to the arrest of those responsible for the outrage. I cannot tell you whom we suspect.

I wish you would deny in the most emphatic terms the published story to the effect that I have received threatening letters, and that I am afraid I will be killed. I have no fears whatever.

We shall proceed cautiously in the investigation and make sure of our ground before making any arrest. Mr. Jordan and his associates have spent a great deal of money to give Boston a fine opera house, and we shall see to it that there will be no repetition of this explosion.

I do not care to say whether or not we suspect either past or present workmen. I would rather not talk too much about the case yet, as it might scare the guilty ones and defeat our aims. The damage to the structure does not exceed $400 and the work will go right on, fortunately, without any interruption.

THE LAST APPEAL FOR MERCY

TROOPS BEAT INDIANS BACK; MANY KILLED

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 29.—One hundred Creek Indians, half-breeds and negroes under personal command of Chief Crazy Snake, kept up their march on the warpath early to-day, retreating doggedly before five companies of determined Oklahoma militiamen, in an effort, apparently, to reach a stronghold in the Tiger Mountains, where they could continue the battle more effectively. The entire State National Guard was ordered out to-day.

The militiamen ordered out yesterday as a result of the uprising that came after a clash at the home of Crazy Snake, in which Marshal Baum and Deputy Sheriff Odom were killed, camped for the night at Hickory Hills, the camp which had been hastily evacuated by Crazy Snake at their approach. At dawn the soldiers moved forward to give battle to the redskins, but the chief led his forces away, apparently not caring to fight in the open.

Troops Gaining on Them.

The militiamen pushed forward at dou-

HARVARD TEAM CHIEF WEDS AT GRETNA GREEN

Captain Albert Cochrane of the Harvard lacrosse team, it was learned to-day, quietly slipped away to Providence Saturday and married Miss Hannah Estelle Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Noyes of No. 27 Harmon street, Stoneham. The news of the sudden wedding was a surprise to their friends, and to-day congratulations were showered upon them from all sides.

"They couldn't wait any longer," said a brother of the bride. "They have been engaged for some time, you know, and were to have been married in June, after Mr. Cochrane's graduation. There was absolutely no objection to the match, only Mr. Cochrane's parents thought it best that he should wait until after completing his college course."

The lacrosse was taken out in Providence early Saturday. Rev. De Krome, a Congregational minister, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Cochrane attended the Stoneham High School for two years and has been prominent in the town's society.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice G. Cochrane. He was graduated from Melrose High School in 1905. In his "prep" days he was captain of the Melrose High hockey team. He was also well known as a sprinter and basket-ball player.

STORM DOORS ALL DAY FOR OPERA SEATS

Several Bostonians went to Hammerstein's grand opera at the Boston Theatre at 7 a. m. to-day.

That is—they went to the gallery entrance at Harlem place to get preferred position for the gallery rush. There they started in to wait for the opening of the doors to-night.

Out in the Back Bay and other homes of the wealthy, women are gradually fagging out magnificent toilettes and preparing to go in their autos or carriages to the opera to-night in the leisurely manner which is the privilege of wealth. But that would not do for the gallery-seekers.

The gallery contingent grew in numbers as the day progressed. Many women came. As the day wore on women and girls formed the majority of the waiting throng. A great many were musical students. They seemed to look on the waiting game as somewhat of a lark and as well worth the operatic treat to come. They made themselves comfortable with books, magazines and luncheon.

All this time Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini was ensconsed in the Touraine, jealously guarded from even impertinent currents of air. The idea of anyone seeing her was stalled at in decision. She must rest. She must prepare for the grand event, her Boston premiere to-night. She must not be disturbed. She must not talk. She must strain her voice. Above all she might get an attack of "nerves" and up over the whole first-night schedule.

ITALIANS UNDO WORK OF PETROSINO

NEW YORK, March 29.—According to cable advices received here from Rome, the Italian police, when they seized the papers of Lieutenant Petrosino, warned every Italian whose name was found in the New York detective's books, and thus all of the work done by the murdered official has been counteracted.

In Rome the grave consequences of the fact that Petrosino's papers fell into the hands of the Sicilian police are fully realized. It is commonly believed that the Palermo police and the Mafia are really hand in glove with each other.

In whose hands the dagraphes are, the Sicilian authorities resented Petrosino's work there as an intrusion and the murdered police agent a mind here that Petrosino was simply a victim of his Sicilian conferees or that they betrayed him to the Mafia.

The Rome Tribune is quoted, says the New York World, as saying: "The Neapolitan and the Sicilian police are all implicated with the Mafia or the Camorra. The moment Petrosino's papers fell into their hands I knew that a grave misfortune had taken place, for the chief of police will run over every criminal here or in America whose name is written in Petrosino's books."

FIREMAN INJURED IN TROLLEY CRASH

Ladderman Dennis J. Hurley, attached to Cambridge Company 17, Harrison avenue, was severely shaken up in the crash of two Cambridge and Charlestown cars opposite the corner of Beach and Sonita streets to-day. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital and treated for numerous bruises about the body. Later he was sent to his home, No. 55 Sturbridge street, Mattapan.

Hurley was riding on the front platform of the Cambridge car, following directly an inbound Charlestown car. The latter stopped abruptly and the collision followed.

HOROUGHLY interested in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S Great Race Around the World, in which four of the schoolboys of the Metropolitan District will compete with boys of the same age from four other great American cities, and in the great opportunity offered to four schoolgirls to make tours of Europe during the coming vacation, hundreds of schoolboys and schoolgirls, in a great many cases accompanied by their parents, or elder brothers or sisters, have for the past week been calling at the AMERICAN office on Summer street daily to make inquiries about the great contest.

Nothing could better illustrate the unlimited possibilities of an opportunity of this kind as an educational factor than to notice the type of schoolboy and schoolgirl which it interests.

One bright young miss, Elsie M. MRS. FARMER MADE A FULL CONFESSION

trocution are Miss Mary Gorman and Mrs. John Dunnigan, the women of her death watch; Mrs. Dr. Helen M. Westfall of Moravia, Miss Agnes Baird of Troy and Miss Margaret T. Byrne of Auburn. Besides the women there were a score of men physicians, officials and newspaper reporters, who gathered in the office of Warden Benham a few minutes before 6 o'clock.

Mary Farmer spent the night in cell No. 1 in the condemned row opening into the death house. At 11 the other prisoners had been taken from the corridor. She occupied it alone, with the two women of her watch waiting outside her cell. They remained with her until the final summons came. She was resigned and deeply religious. She neither wept nor complained but she prayed incessantly.

She was engaged with the priest in prayer when Warden Benham led the procession of witnesses from his office across the prison yard to the death house.

Women in Front Seats.

The witnesses of the electrocution were seated, the three women physicians and the two trained nurses occupying front seats. Warden Benham gave a quick glance around and walked over to the painted door opening into the death cell and knocked. It opened instantly, and the procession of death entered.

Father Hickey came first. Behind him came Mary Farmer, supported on either side by Mrs. Dunnigan and Miss Gorman.

She was dressed in shabby black. Her face was the color of chalk. Her eyes were closed. She did not see the room, the people, the chair. Father Hickey leaned close to her and murmured the prayer which she kept repeating until the end:

"Jesus, Mary and Joseph have mercy on me."

The two women guards had prepared Mrs. Farmer for the execution by tightly braiding her hair, to insure a contact with the head electrode.

The braids were gathered in a knot at the back of her head. Her dress was slit up the right side, and there was a slit in her right stocking to allow the application of the leg electrode.

Dies Murmuring Prayers.

Father Hickey leaned toward her, insistently repeating the prayer which he had told her she must continue to make as long as her lips could move.

There were only a few steps from the door opening into the place of execution, and the chair glistening in its hard, shiny oak finish and hideously and grotesquely draped with wires and electrodes and straps. In the brightly lighted chamber the woman's acquiline features, the weak mouth, the sloping brow and the rather high cheek bones showed masked in the ashen hue of fear of death. Her brown hair seemed lifeless. Her hands were colorless as they dropped over the arms of the women who helped her keep her feet.

The few steps to the chair seemed to take a year's time to the witnesses who had gathered in the chamber. The last step was made, the woman was turned so that she faced the witnesses and then the supporting arms of the attendants left her.

She crumpled into the chair, a little pile of shabby black cloth beneath which beat a heart that in a moment more would be shocked into eternal stillness. Some of the witnesses turned away from the sight of the spectacle.

When she was seated Dr. Westfall and the two nurses arose from their seats and went to her. The five women screened her from view as the electrodes were applied by State Electrician Davis, Captain W. C. Patterson and the guards.

Then Mr. Davis stepped over to the box partition in the corner, the women withdrew to their seats, the death watch drew back and the warden gave the signal.

The light hum on the dynamos made the death room seem to pulse with life, and as Electrician Davis brought down his lever this dull sound was intensified.

The current was applied at five minutes past six.

Moans in Anguish.

A prayer was on the woman's lips at the instant, and it changed to a sudden moan of anguish as she stiffened against the straps that held her into the chair. The leather mask from the steel-capped electrode that was clapped down on her head hid her face, so that the terrible agony shown there could not be seen. But her loose fingers gripped convulsively as the deadly current of 1,840 volts was sent through her body. Through an aperture in her mask her upper lip could be seen to turn suddenly black and draw away from her teeth. Her gripped hands lost the semblance of human flesh and were a jet black.

The current was kept on for a full minute, Mr. Davis lowering it and then raising it. When it was shut off the body of Mary Farmer sagged limply in the chair. Dr. Gorin, the prison physician, stepped forward and applied the stethoscope to her bared bosom. There was still a flutter of life and he drew back. Again the current was applied and kept on for five seconds. Persistent life fluttered still within her breast and a third contact was given, lasting three seconds. Then Dr. Gorin after his examination called Dr. Lambert of Ward's Island, Dr. Sommers of Ogdensburg, Dr. Boyle of Buffalo and the other physician. Each applied the stethoscope and announced that death had ensued. When their examination was at an end Warden Benham turned to the witnesses and said:

"The woman is dead. The witnesses will please gather in the warden's office and sign the certificate."

Immediately after the electrocution Warden Benham sent the following telegram to Governor Hughes and Superintendent of State Prisons Cornelius V. Collins:

"Execution very successful. There were no distressing incidents."

The autopsy was held in the prison laboratory immediately west of the electrocution chamber. Nearly a score of physicians were present, including half a dozen women. The party was under the supervision of Dr. E. A. Spitzka of Jefferson Medical College, Dr. Charles I. Lambert of the Pathological Institute, Ward's Island, and Dr. E. M. Sommers, St. Lawrence Insane Hospital at Ogdensburg.

One statement given out was that the brain had been found to be normal, weighing 45 ounces, the other organs were said to be in healthy condition also. The report will be made by Dr. Lambert and the others present were warned not to talk for publication.

Exonerates Husband.

Father Hickey met the newspaper reporters in the office of the warden and gave out copies of Mary Farmer's confession. It was in her own words and given as she wished it to be made.

"I give this at Mrs. Farmer's request," the priest said. "She wanted it known that her husband had no hand in the murder for which she died to-day. She made this statement in the presence of a notary and signed it. She hoped to the last that it might save the life of James Farmer."

All night in the "death cell" Mrs. Farmer was attended by the women watchers and her spiritual adviser, the Rev. J. J. Hickey.

The woman had been allowed to say farewell to her husband, James D. Farmer, also under sentence of death for having aided her in the murder.

In all the prison history of New York there has never been such a meeting. James D. Farmer occupied cell No. 3 in the condemned corridor, which is separated by a wall of metal, thin and resonant from the chamber in which stands the electric chair. With him in that corridor were Luigi Gianbacuta, William Scott, Pacy Hill and Guisseppe Sanduci, all condemned to death for the murder of fellow men.

At 7:30 o'clock the two women tapped at the bars of Mrs. Farmer's cell and told her they were waiting to take her to her husband. She was dressed then as she was when she was taken into the death chamber to-day, in a plain black dress, the skirt slit up the right side to make room for the application of the leg electrode. She wore nothing on her head, and there were glistening flakes of snow on her black hair.

She was driven directly back of the warden's office, and led by Captain Martin, of the prison guard, into the corridor. Cell No. 1 stood open, and into this she was piloted.

The door of the cell is iron barred, of the usual type, through which they might readily have embraced and kissed each other. But when the door was closed with a clang, and bolted, a woven lattice screen of steel wire was wheeled before it. Then James Farmer was brought from his cell further down the corridor and allowed to gaze at his wife and she at him. They might speak to one another, but they could not even clasp hands. The touch of a finger was not permitted.

"Good-Bye Jim."

Mary Farmer was first to speak when she saw her husband face to face for the first time since their trial.

"Good-bye, Jim," she said. "I've told the truth, and maybe it will help you."

The husband was more affected by the meeting than the woman. Father Hickey, who was present, the two guards and Captain Martin stood aloof and allowed the two to talk undisturbed. Mary Farmer told her husband of her hopes for the boy; of the letter she had written; of her wish to have him brought up in ignorance of the crime of his parents.

She made James Farmer promise that if he escaped death in the electric chair he would not thwart her plans.

Farmer promised. He seemed deeply impressed, almost awed, by the solemnity of the meeting and parting through the grate and screen. He had not much to say, and it was the woman who talked most. Both wept, and when the moment of farewell came Farmer was led away weeping.

Mrs. Mary Farmer, electrocuted to-day.

REFRIGERATOR AMUCK IN SHIP

The Norwegian tramp steamer Francis came into port to-day with its refrigerator upside down and securely lashed, after terrorizing the entire ship for hours in a hurricane.

The Francis came up from Macoris, San Domingo, ran into the hurricane of last Thursday off Hatteras and was obliged to heave to for ten hours, helpless before the gale.

The Francis has a huge teakwood refrigerator, which weighs a ton and which is boasted as being stout enough to defy any kind of weather.

A huge sea broke over the stern in the hurricane, wrenched the refrigerator from its fastenings and then sent it knocking about the after deck, smashing two steam winches, kicking a coop full of hens out to sea and knocking two gaps in the starboard rail.

A sudden slant of the deck pitched the refrigerator upside down into a corner.

SEVERED HAND PUT BACK AND IS SAVED

KALAMAZOO, Mich., March 29.—The hand that was severed from the wrist of Charles Miller at a paper factory here recently has been successfully rejoined to his arm, and it is said that the young man will shortly be discharged from Bronson Hospital with the prospect of regaining full use of his hand. Only a small piece of flesh held the arm and hand together when the accident happened, but doctors quickly bound them together and the wound has rapidly healed.

Doctors here say that few such operations have resulted successfully.

BOSTON ROADS IN RATE WAR

Members of the transportation boards of the trade organizations of Boston said to-day that the threatened rate war among the big trunk lines would be averted, and that the Boston & Maine and New Haven roads would fight it out with the Boston & Albany for the western import business of New England.

A Washington despatch says that the Interstate Commerce Commissioners have been given to understand that the lines running out of New York to the West will file no further reduced rate schedules.

A Boston commercial leader said to-day that the companies running to New York could afford no further cut in freight tariffs and the business going through New York is so much greater than through the port of Boston that they cannot afford to haggle over the New England situation.

The Boston & Maine started the rate slashing by cutting one cent per 100 pounds for freight carried to the West. This equalized the differential which had been enjoyed by the roads running to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. The trunk lines met the cut, but the Boston & Maine made a cut of another cent. The Boston & Albany, owned by the New York Central, followed suit, but the lines running out of New York "stood pat."

Free Thinker Kills Nun and Himself in Convent.

ROME—Rome is greatly shocked to learn that Napoleon Parboni, a former Garibaldian soldier, visited a convent here on Saturday and asked for an interview with a nun named Ricciotti. As soon as she appeared he shot the sister dead and then committed suicide.

The motive for the double crime is apparently connected with an attempt to induce a daughter of Parboni, who is a Free Thinker, to enter a convent. Parboni intervened, and the daughter died of grief at not being allowed to carry out her desires.

Parboni was greatly attached to his daughter, and it is believed that her death overthrew his reason.

FREE LUMBER, JAMES' PLEA

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The second week of the general debate on the tariff bill began at 10 o'clock to-day. Representative James of Kentucky made the opening speech. He denounced the Payne bill as being most unfair to the farmers. In discussing the maximum and minimum section of the bill, he said the enforcement of the maximum rate would wipe off the free list more than fifty articles. He said he had received a number of letters from farmers in his district, urging him to vote for a $2 tax on lumber, but he had told his constituents that as free lumber would benefit the masses of the people and lighten the burdens of the poor man, he would vote to place lumber on the free list.

There are some members from New England, he said, who want to take money out of the treasury to re-forest Appalachian and White Mountain ranges, but they are opposed to free lumber. In speaking for the income tax, Mr. James said he was satisfied that if the question came before the Supreme Court it would be declared constitutional.

Representative Cushman of Washington said he thought the bill would meet the approval of the American people.

TWO ARRESTS IN PRINTER'S DEATH CASE

Roderick C. McKenzie, aged twenty-two, and Murdock B. McGregor, thirty-six years of age, attendants at the Boston Insane Hospital on Pierce Farm, Roslindale, were arrested to-day by Captain Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation and Inspectors McGarr and Waite, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Richard F. Mitchell, a patient there, who died on Wednesday.

Both defendants were held in bonds of $5,000 each for hearing on April 6 in the Roxbury court.

Dr. Noyes, who attended the man for pneumonia at the asylum, became suspicious after his death and an autopsy was performed by Medical Examiner McDonald. He found that the man's left wrist was sprained and seven ribs were broken.

The funeral was held to-day at 10 o'clock at the Mission Church, Roxbury. Mass was celebrated by Father Mullaney and burial was at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury. A delegation of fifty members of Typographical Union No. 13, of which Mr. Mitchell was a member, escorted the body from his former home at No. 1,512 Tremont street, to the church.

Up to a short time ago Mr. Mitchell was employed upon a local newspaper. He became ill and was treated at the Massachusetts General Hospital for mental trouble. He continued to grow worse and was sent to the Pierce farm, by Dr. Jelley, where his death occurred twelve days later.

The authorities declare that he had no broken ribs when committed to the asylum.

The Boston Typographical Union yesterday adopted resolutions in which that organization called on the authorities for a rigid investigation of the circumstances indicating that the man was beaten and urging an autopsy.

HERMIT PLEADS CASE; HELD FOR SHOOTING

Albert L. Thompson, the seventy-five-year-old Watertown hermit who yesterday twice shot Matthew Murphy, was to-day held in $2,000 for the Superior Court by Judge Luce. Thompson was arraigned in the Waltham District Court on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He had no lawyer and conducted his own case. For the past ten years Thompson has been living as a recluse in a barn on the old Morse estate. He has the privilege of planting on the land about the place. According to witnesses in court to-day, Murphy, who is twenty-seven years old and lives on California street, Watertown, started to cross the land used by Thompson.

NAPLES MUST GIVE UP ROOSEVELT FETE

NAPLES, March 29.—The fact that Ex-President Roosevelt will only remain here for twenty-four hours has caused general disappointment. The authorities and the residents originally were of the opinion that Mr. Roosevelt's visit would cover several days, and preparations were under way for demonstrations of popular good will commensurate with the prominence of the distinguished visitor.

In the party of Ambassador Griscom, who will meet the ex-President, will be Mrs. Rushforth, Mr. Roosevelt's cousin; Miss Carew, Mrs. Roosevelt's sister, and Francis B. Keene, the American Consul at Geneva, who was a classmate of Mr. Roosevelt at Harvard.

POPE OPENS NEW VATICAN GALLERY

ROME, March 29.—The Pope, surrounded by the pontifical court, the diplomatic representatives and many members of the Roman aristocracy, inaugurated the new picture gallery of the Vatican yesterday. Father Hagen, director of the Vatican observatory, was the only American present. The ceremony was rendered more interesting as this was the anniversary of the birth of Raphael.

GIRL HELD IN $3,000 BONDS IN DEATH CASE

Miss May Greene of No. 26 Dwight street, South End, was arraigned in the Municipal Court to-day charged with being an accessory before the fact to the death of Alice McKinley, who expired under suspicious circumstances Thursday at the City Hospital. She was held under a $3,000 bond, and the case was continued until April 1, at the request of her attorney, Edward M. McEttrick.

The defendant was a friend of Miss McKinley.

Miss Greene was detained by Captain station, on Saturday. With Patrolman James Clifford and Special Officer William Irwin present, the young woman was closely questioned for several hours Saturday night and Sunday morning, in an effort to learn what she knew of Miss McKinley's death.

The police to-day admitted that they were practically sure of the identity of a man responsible for the girl's death. He has an office on Columbus avenue, and is not a registered physician. Another arrest is expected at any minute.

Miss McKinley lived at No. 22 Dwight street, in a lodging house. The authorities say that when she became ill she and two girl friends went to an office on Columbus avenue. Miss Greene was asked by the police if she did not go with the girl now dead. It is said that she denied any knowledge of the case. After being questioned by the captain she was booked and was sent to the Tombs.

The funeral of Miss McKinley was held at No. 22 Dwight street, yesterday afternoon, with a number of her friends and relatives present. Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery in Arlington.

Miss McKinley was the daughter of William McKinley, who lives in South street, Reading. Several months ago she obtained employment as cashier in a South End drug store.

INDIANS BEATEN BACK BY WHITES

ble quick. The Indians were about ten miles away, but the troops were determined the redskins should not be allowed to choose the battleground and thus gain enormous advantage. The troops outnumbered the Indians three to one, but should the latter gain the shelter of the hills the outcome might be doubtful.

At the rate of progress they were making, the troops were in a fair way to overhaul the Indians shortly after noon and force them to fight in the open.

The night passed without any alarms after the soldiers had bivouacked. The indications were at dawn that Crazy Snake's negroes were giving him much trouble. They came from the turbulent, never-do-well class of the South. Many of them fled to Oklahoma to escape the consequences of crimes.

Frontiersmen acting as scouts for the State troops who passed most of the night near the Indians' camp returned shortly after daybreak with news that the old chieftain's forces were showing signs of disintegration. The halfbreeds and negroes, overawed at the active measures of the whites, were counselling either abject flight or complete surrender, these scouts asserted. To these propositions Crazy Snake made a contemptuous refusal. He said that all those who feared might go at once, but that all who had real red hearts would stay by him and help him forcefully to redress the wrongs under which his people writhed.

To a man the Creeks expressed their intention of fighting the State's soldiers to the death. So enthusiastic did they become after Crazy Snake's appeal that a war dance was started. Crazy Snake arrayed himself in savage toggery which hitherto had been kept hidden. The scouts hastily went back to their camp at Hickory Hills and reported that the Indians really meant to fight.

Burned Their Tepees.

Hastily setting fire to tepees and tents, the Indians fled from their camp as the troops advanced and took up a strong position between the North Canadian River and Deep Fork Creek, about seven miles east of Henryetta.

Colonel Hoffman, in command of the tSate troops, decided it would be unwise to push the pursuit and engage the Indians in the darkness. Accordingly, he bivouacked for the night. Early in the morning, reinforced by a company of cowboys, all crack shots, he started his forces against the Indians.

Dr. J. M. Wallace of Dustin, Okla., who went to the Hickory Hills with the State troops, says that more than thirty negroes and Indians were killed Thursday and Saturday and were buried in the field where the troops camped.

Crazy Snake's band strongly entrenched itself early in the day, and was re-enforced from time to time by roving companies which were scared away from Henryetta by the approach of the troops.

At dawn the special officers began firing on the main band of Indians. Several Indians are reported wounded. This engagement was near Pierce, and off the railroad about twenty miles southwest of Checotah.

A second engagement occurred near Stedman in which fifty shots were exchanged, and one Indian was seriously wounded. Several of the Indians' horses weer captured.

HISGENS OPEN WAR ON OIL TRUST HERE

Thomas L. Hisgen, who got more votes for Governor of Massachusetts in 1907 than were received by the head of the Democratic ticket, to-day announced the entry of the Hisgen brothers into the Boston field as competitors of the Standard Oil Company.

The independent concern filed an application with the city clerk for a permit to store oil on Cambridge street, Brighton. There the Hisgen brothers will have their central station. Local distributing stations will be established throughout the greater city. The location for the Brighton plant has already been secured.

For twenty years the Hisgens have been the only successful rivals of the Rockefeller trust in the East. They have in the face of the most desperate opposition, built up a flourishing trade in six leading centres: Albany, Springfield, Northampton, Pittsfield, Fitchburg and Hartford.

Have Brought Lower Prices.

In every one of these places their advent has meant a reduction in the price of oil. The Standard has met their cuts and even tried to give away oil to the Hisgens' customers; yet everywhere the people have stood by them, knowing the benefits of competition.

At Albany, in the government's suit to dissolve the trust as a conspiracy in restraint of trade, grocer after grocer testified that they spurned the offers. "I told their agent to throw his oil in the gutter, that was the place for it!" testified a dealer from Pittsfield.

The entry of the independent firm into the New England metropolis is of the greatest significance to oil consumers. The price charged by the Standard in almost every city and town where the trust has enjoyed the monopoly has been from 12 to 15 cents. The same rate has obtained in Boston. The coming of the Hisgens insures a drop in the price.

To Deliver in Autos.

"It means a war to the finish," said Thomas L. Hisgen and his brother Henry to-day; "but we have considered the step carefully, and we are going to win."

An innovation will be the use of automobiles to deliver to customers. These will be used extensively for long distance hauling, and horse delivery for the custom.

The Hisgens are about to build a big refining plant on the Gulf of Mexico. The completion of this plant will enable the concern to further lower the price. This plant will refine from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 gallons of crude oil annually.

CHESTER S. JORDAN ARRAIGNED TO-DAY FOR KILLING WIFE and formally describe the alleged crime, but that it is vague, indefinite and uncertain. He said that it was drawn under a chapter which is unconstitutional and void and in violation of the Massachusetts Bill of Rights and of the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

"Improperly on Panel."

Another reason for the indictment being void was the fact that two of the grand jurors, James J. McCarthy of Holliston and Niles D. Leach of Ashland, were improperly on the jury panel because there were a larger number of jurors drawn from these towns than the law provided for.

He argued as still another reason for the quashing of the indictment the presence of Lieutenant Eugene Carter of the Somerville police and Captain Joseph Dugan and Sergeant Michael H. Crowley of the Boston police in the Grand Jury room while the jury was considering the testimony.

Pratt said that the illegal drawing of jurymen by the selectmen had placed two men on the Grand Jury who were ineligible there.

He said the problem of more than one witness being in the Grand Jury room had been threshed out in the Tucker trial. He introduced it again because it furnished a bad precedent, and that some day the practice might result in grave wrong.

Higgins Makes Reply.

District Attorney Higgins argued half an hour. He declared there was no law for setting aside an indictment found by a Grand Jury when more than one witness was in the room when testimony was being got, or because one juror had perhaps been illegally drawn.

The district attorney made a general argument against the arguments of Mr. Pratt, except as to the unconstitutionality of the law under which the indictment was drawn. He said he would not even consider this.

Judge Sherman finally said:

"I overrule the motion to quash."

"Then, Your Honor, I take exceptions," said Attorney Pratt.

"Your exceptions will be saved," said the judge. "Now on the plea in jurisdiction, I will not decide just now. I will take a few days to consider it, but I believe I will overrule that plea also. Still this is of such important nature that I desire to give it some study."

"Well, Your Honor, I will take exception to that ruling also," said Attorney Pratt, "if it should be made."

Judge Sherman taking off his glasses and smiling at the array of counsel for the defence, remarked:

"I think, Mr. Pratt, that I would do you a favor if I should disallow your plea in jurisdiction. If I should grant it it would mean quite a hardship to your client. He would be compelled to wait in jail until next October before a new indictment could be drawn. The case would have to be begun practically all over again. I think I shall deny your plea, but I won't say so to-day."

"Be Prepared for Trial."

Mr. Pratt said: "We would be glad, Your Honor, for an early decision."

Judge Sherman said: "I'll make it at a very early date. Meanwhile both sides, I think, had better be prepared for the trial, set, I believe, for April 20."

"It looks," said Attorney Pratt to his associates after this last comment of Judge Sherman, "as if our plea in jurisdiction would go the way of our motion to quash."

"We will be ready, if need be, for trial on April 20," said Mr. Pratt.

"And the government will be ready also," said District Attorney Higgins.

Jordan bore the sharp scrutiny of the crowd with pronounced indifference. He made no effort to conceal his features. He walked erectly and looked straight ahead.

He was dressed in a natty, up-to-date suit of dark green with a thin stripe of lighter green. The suit was cut after the latest pattern. It was stylish but very modest. The coat and trousers had been faultlessly creased. He wore a turn-down collar with a dark green four-in-hand necktie. On his head was a broad-brimmed black Fedora hat. He wore a white negligee shirt with a tiny black dot in the pattern. Black Oxfords and black hose completed his clothing.

"For medicinal purposes only" will be construed as meaning for the treatment or prevention of disease of man or other animal. Smoking opium will be seized forthwith and destroyed as an illegal importation.

Opium other than smoking opium imported for medicinal purposes may be entered for immediate transportation in bond to and for consumption or for warehouse only at the ports of Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Honolulu, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Porto Rico, San Francisco, Seattle and St. Louis.

RECONCILIATION FAILS, WOMAN IS GRANTED DIVORCE

Elinor C. Bates.

A decree nisi was granted at Dedham to-day to Mrs. Elinor C. Bates of Boston and East Weymouth from Dr. Edward N. Bates, a Tremont street dentist.

When the trial was on last December in the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham, Judge Sanderson continued the case till January in an effort to reconcile the couple.

Mrs. Bates charged her husband with cruel and abusive treatment and intoxication. In adjourning the trial Judge Sanderson said:

"There is no good reason in my opinion why this couple cannot be reconciled. Bates still loves his wife. They have their four-year-old boy. The evidence has not yet convinced me that Bates is a confirmed drunkard."

Judge Sanderson instructed the counsel to try to effect a reconciliation. But this evidently failed, for Judge Sanderson has now filed with the clerk of the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham his decree granting Mrs. Bates her decree nisi.

Mrs. Bates is to have the custody of four-year-old John E. Bates, and is to be paid $8 a week alimony by Dr. Bates, beginning April 1.

ARRAIGN BOYLE AS KIDNAPPER

MERCER, Pa., March 29.—James Boyle, held as the abductor of Billy Whitla, was taken to Sharon to-day to be arraigned on the charge of kidnapping. Boyle expressed a willingness to go and did not fear the residents of Sharon would molest him. Several deputies however, were sworn in to accompany Sheriff Chase, to be prepared for any possible outbreak at Sharon. Boyle returns to Mercer late this afternoon.

The prisoner, handcuffed to Sheriff Chess and securely guarded, left Mercer on the Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad for Shanango, where close connections were made with the Pennsylvania train for Sharon. Mrs. Boyle will be arraigned before Justice Gilbert to-morrow.

The sheriff's party rode to the station in a hack. A crowd quickly gathered around the car, but there was no disturbance.

FEAR MISSING BOY IS DROWNED

LOWELL, March 29.—Search is being made for two and one-half-year-old Johnnie Howarth, who was last seen playing in a woodyard near the Merrimack River with five-year-old Mary Quinn.

Mary is deaf and dumb. She was made with difficulty to understand that Johnnie was wanted. She could not talk, but she pointed eloquently toward the river. It is feared that Johnnie, in playing in the woodyard, fell down the banking into the river. If he is not found to-day the river will be dragged.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Howarth of No. 15 Second street and is a bright appearing youngster of chubby frame.

POLICE TRAIL RENIGER FOR STOCK FRAUD

John H. Reniger of this city, who the postal authorities say victimized several hundred thousand New England persons out of over a million dollars by means of mining stocks, is in hiding in a New York hotel.

This information came to Chief Postoffice Inspector Letherman to-day. Postoffice inspectors are searching for Reniger in New York.

Reniger is a fugitive from justice. He was indicted by the U. S. grand jury on Tuesday, for using the mails in a scheme to defraud. He carried on extensive operations in a handsomely furnished suite in the Journal Building, No. 262 Washington street.

Developments this afternoon tend to show that Reniger was just about to put through several big deals in mining companies when he was forced to flee from this city.

Among the New England persons whom the postoffice authorities declare were victimized by Reniger are: F. L. Dodge of Westbrook, Me., $700; F. L. Crafton, Westbrook, Me., $200; Eugene Creedon, a letter carrier of Everett, $200, and John H. Parker, a manufacturer of arctic shoes, Malden.

It is alleged these persons were victimized by Reniger through the sale of bonds of the American Mines Company, Limited. Postoffice authorities maintain that thousands of other investors were also victimized through the operations of Reniger in this stock, as well as in the stock of the Nevada-Goldfield Mining, Milling and Smelting Company.

Reniger, who was the president of J. H. Reniger & Co., bankers, in the Journal Building, is said to be the man behind one of the greatest get-rich-quick schemes in the history of finance. Major Thomas H. Windsor, also formerly of Boston, and now under arrest in New York on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud, is alleged to have been Reniger's silent partner.

Reniger is alleged to have been the "big gun" in the company. It is said that he has in his possession at the present time a statement from Major Windsor, exonerating him from any complicity in any scheme to defraud investors.

SERVIA GIVES IN; PEACE IN THE BALKANS

BELGRADE, March 29.—Servia has surrendered completely to the demands of Europe, and the tension of six months over the Balkan situation came to an end this afternoon. The action of Servia will set the Balkan question at rest for many years, it is believed.

A dispatch from Vienna says that an influential party in the Servian Parliament is agitating against the Karageorgevitch dynasty, the family of King Peter, and discussing Prince Arthur of Connaught as a possible successor to the throne, as well as the Duke of Teck.

PARTY LINES ON TREASURER

Democratic members of the Legislature sprang a sensation on Beacon Hill to-day by announcing that they will nominate a Democratic candidate for State Treasurer.

This office is to be filled by the Legislature as the result of the selection of State Treasurer Arthur B. Chapin to succeed Pierre Jay, bank commissioner.

The decision to nominate a candidate came when it was seen that the Republicans were hopelessly split over Senator Elmer A. Stevens of Somerville and Albert P. Lanitry of Springfield.

Edwin B. Kenney of Pittsfield, Democratic candidate for State Treasurer last Fall, is mentioned as a probable choice of the Democrats.

Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 16, Boston, was the first Democratic member of the Legislature to cry "hands off." "The Democrats will make the biggest mistake ever if they meddle in this fight," he said. "Let the Republicans fight it out among themselves."

ARREST WOMEN AFTER NEAR RIOT

Mrs. Nellie Trainor and Mrs. Mary Bangs, of No. 8 Nicholson court, Roxbury, are arraigned in court to-day charged with drunkenness. Their arrest was the result of the loss of a pair of eyeglasses by Mrs. Josephine Hart of No. 55 Hillside street, Roxbury, while attending mass at the Mission Church. Scenes of wild disorder attended their arrest, and they were taken after a fusillade of stones, crockery and household articles followed by a long chase in which several hundred people took place.

WOULD SUPERVISE LOANS BY CITIES

The Local Government Board Committee, recently organized, with Hon. John D. Long, chairman, and John S. Hodgdon, secretary, and headquarters at No. 6 Beacon street, hopes to further the establishment of a small State board for the supervision of Massachusetts city loans. It is anticipated that the work of the board would not only result in the application of sound financial rules in individual cases, but also establish data for the future.

NEWMARKET, N. H., March 29.—Badly decomposed by long immersion in the water, the body of J. Worthen David, '11, one of the two students of the New Hampshire State College who were drowned on the night of Dec. 7, last, was found on the shore of Great Bay.

Telephone Emergencies.

THREE VARIETIES of emergency telephone service are, without charge, at the behest of the public. They were devised years ago by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company in order to render what it believed was a proper public service to the community at large, as well as a valuable service to the Company's subscribers. They are:

1. Emergency Calls For The Fire Department
2. Emergency Calls For The Police
3. Emergency Calls For Physicians

Such calls may be made without charge, from his own telephone by a subscriber, or from a Pay Station telephone by a non-subscriber, if either states that he desires to make an emergency call.

The formula is very simple: Signal the operator in the usual way, briefly state the nature of the emergency, and ask to be connected with the police, the firemen or one or more physicians, as the case may be. The operator immediately will comply.

TWO IMPORTANT WARNINGS.

1—If there is an established fire alarm system in the place, a call for the Fire Department also should be made from the nearest fire alarm box. Regard the telephone as an auxiliary of, rather than a substitute for, the usual fire alarm call. The Company can assume no responsibility for an emergency notification, but will use its best endeavors to connect you promptly.

2—If the emergency is of particularly serious nature—a railroad wreck, a large fire, a serious accident, involving injury or death to many—do not leave the telephone without also calling for the Chief Operator, so that an executive official of our Traffic Department may take such further steps as the nature of the emergency shall suggest.

This advertisement is printed for two purposes:

*2—To remind prospective subscribers of the great value of such service as a protective and precautionary measure, and to suggest that the quickest way to have a telephone installed is to make a call (also without charge) to Fort Hill 7600.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

STEAD SMILES AT CARNEGIE'S PEACE DREAM

Special Cable to Boston American.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

LONDON, March 29.—The British naval scare is subsiding. Mr. Balfour has provoked reaction by exaggeration, and the British naval supremacy is now admittedly secure until 1912.

I know, personally, that the Asquith Ministry always intended to provide for eight Dreadnoughts this year, and although the Liberal leaders took a vote for only four, they expressly provided in the estimates for legislative sanction to buy materials for eight.

Premier Asquith will, I understand, make this plain to-day, and following that I expect Mr. Balfour will withdraw his vote of censure. Then the ministerial programme of four Dreadnoughts voted, plus four others sanctioned, will be unanimously approved and the nation will breathe easily. The unanimous passage of the settled German naval estimates by the Reichstag had a steadying effect upon those who were trying to make party capital out of our naval scare.

The Carnegie Anathema.

I read with amused interest Mr. Carnegie's anathema on Dreadnoughts. It is characteristic but unavailing. Nothing is more certain than that the inventive ingenuity of man in devising instruments of slaughter will run its course and ultimately bring in the reign of peace and law.

Lord Lytton's "Coming Race," in which the discovetry of "vril," a terribly destructive compound of high explosives and electricity with which whole armies could be destroyed by a child's hand, and the consequent abandonment of wars, is more likely to be a correct forecast than Mr. Carnegie's pacific dream of securing peace by legislative or diplomatic restrictions upon the deadliness or dimensions of armaments.

In a somewhat similar way the Servian Crown Prince's abdication is a picturesque incident which may remove one element of danger from the Balkan situation, but otherwise it is of no importance.

Rests with Francis Joseph.

It is not the renunciation of the boy prince that will avert war in the near East. I abide by my conviction that there will be no war until Francis Joseph dies and the snow melts in the Balkans. Moreover, Russia by definitely recognizing the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina has merely ratified secret treaties previously concluded with Austria.

Keep your eye in America upon the new anti-sweating bill introduced into Parliament by young Mr. Winston Churchill. It is an attempt to enforce a minimum wage in industries where wages are forced down below the standard of subsistence. It is the most Socialistic proposal ever introduced by the English Government. It is, of course, enthusiastically acclaimed by the Labor party, but it is likely to react unfavorably upon free trade.

NOVELTIES IN SHUMAN STOCK

The nature shades are among the features of this Spring's exclusive styles in men's business suits, and the sterner sex seems to have emulated femininity in securing the long-waisted effect in sack coats.

The most distinctive tailorings embodying these new Spring patterns are found this week in the big style display of apparel of all kinds at the store of A. Shuman & Company. The newest and smartest offerings for men, women and children can be seen here.

The men's clothing presented at Shuman's Corner is of especial interest. The 1909 lines, which are designed and manufactured in the company's own shops, are unsurpassed in originality, style and quality of textures. The "Nature Shades" are decidedly in the way of innovation. There are stone and wood tones and many combinations in greens and grays, as well as a wide variety of fancy blues.

In the women's department are found new models in the plain tailored style which the firm has long specialized, with some very choice designs in dresses and in the popular three-piece style.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

MARY GARDEN NOW DEFENDED BY MRS. MAYER

CHICAGO, March 29.—Mrs. David Mayer, the wealthy Chicago woman who financed Miss Mary Garden, the prima donna, on the road to fame and fortune, made the following answer to the impassioned pronunciamento which Miss Garden issued from her sick bed in New York in which the songbird denied with fiery phrases that she had ever been a mother:

Why it is true, every word of it—what Mary says: She has been the victim of malicious gossipers. She has been outrageously treated. I hope she will punish her traducers.

I know the life that Mary Garden led. I know that she had her romances. No woman so graced by nature could have escaped them. But such calumnious falsehoods as those which Miss Garden appears to ascribe to me, and which I never uttered in my life.

I deny for as vehemently as she herself has denied them. I know that Mary Garden never has been a mother. That story was told to me in Paris four years ago. I read it again in letters from malicious busybodies.

You know, in Paris the men and women have nothing better to do than to gossip and defame each other. The men congregate at their clubs, wink wisely at one another and retail scandals of each other's wives and sweethearts and especially if the women happen to be beautiful, fascinating and gifted and unprotected, as Miss Garden was.

Scandal Stories Unheaded.

The Parisians know how to take these things. No one pays any serious heed to them. But when these stories cross to America where we are serious and inclined to weigh words and statements, ah, the same stories that draw no resentment in the latter quarter bite and sting and lead men and women to desperation.

I can understand Mary Garden's feelings. She has indeed been the pretty figure in the little affairs of the heart that a woman of her charm and temperament could not avoid, and which are, indeed, the salt of life. But to place her upon such a plane as her libellers have given her surpasses all patience.

She has been ungrateful. I saw her first, a wee slip of a girl here in Chicago with undeveloped talent and a world of temperament and no means. I grew tremendously interested in her. I helped her.

I supplied her the moneys and the encouragement that she needed, and I even extended to greater lengths the favors that I had pledged in my hours of greatest enthusiasm.

Still Angry With Singer.

Now look upon her. She is the worshipped star of a continent. Her name adorns the first pages, and her income is, I am told, $100,000 a year.

And with what am I rewarded by her for making these triumphs possible? I am snubbed by her.

The matter of Mary Garden's snub was then referred to.

Oh, yes, there is no denying it; she certainly gave me the cold shoulder, said Mrs. Mayer smilingly. Now that it is out there is no use hiding the truth. She snubbed me, shamelessly, and in that I see the same spirit as is reflected in her statement in which she says that there never was a social tie between us only the relations which she describes by saying: "I was not so much interested in them as making a name for myself."

That is the quintessence of ingratitude, added Mr. Mayer, who was sitting beside his wife. I see she refers to us as "The means to an end."

Could anything be more bitingly sardonic than that? Could anything kill a man's faith in human nature any deadlier than that?

Never Made Charge, She Says.

Mrs. Mayer expressed again and again the hope that her answer would end the controversy. She said that her only purpose in speaking was to make it plain that she had never made the allegations that Miss Garden had been a mother. She continued:

Even if I knew the statement to be true, neither the rack nor the treadmill would have drawn it from me. No woman with the instincts of her sex would tell of another woman—a woman, the more, who had been her friend, and in whose interest she had spent thought and heart interest.

I regard Mary Garden as one of the greatest actresses that the world has ever produced. She is the most remarkable interpreter of emotion that I have ever witnessed. Had she no singing voice she would have been the greatest of tragediennes. She truly possesses temperament, and for that I can forgive much, because your persons of highly pitched temperament cannot always be held to account as ordinary mortals.

Mrs. Mayer was seated in the sitting room of her magnificent home, No. 4,544 Woodlawn avenue, as she voiced this defence of Miss Garden. Her husband sat beside her, and from words that he interjected it was apparent that he felt in harmony with his wife's views.

SOCIAL EVENTS INCLUDE PLAYS AND MUSICALS

"The Gypsy Queen," an operetta with interpolations that promises to be a decided musical and social success, will be presented by the members of the Civic Service House of the North End in Potter Hall, April 29. The cast includes young men and young women from fifteen clubs in the North and West Ends, and it is hoped that the attendance will be such that a considerable sum of money will be realized for the maintenance of the wage-earners' Summer camp at Hingham.

Active preparations are being made for the fifth annual bazaar of the Madison Association of Massachusetts in Huntington Chambers Hall on Wednesday afternoon and evening. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Lawrence of Roslindale is chairman of the committee of arrangements, while Miss Georgie Berry is in charge of the entertainment.

A musical entertainment will be given by the flower committee of the Second Congregational Church of Dorchester on Wednesday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Terhune, editor of the Boot and Shoe Recorder, No. 18 Melville avenue. The Misses Whitaker, one a pianist and the other violinist, who have just returned from Paris, where they finished their musical education, will make their first formal appearance.

Fully 500 persons were in attendance at the illustrated song lecture on Thomas Moore given by Assistant District Attorney Michael J. Dwyer at Lyceum Hall, East Boston, for the benefit of the sick members of Ladies' Auxiliary 36, A. O. H. Miss Mary F. Digan, president of the order, introduced the speaker.

Vocal and instrumental music, interspersed with brief addresses and a debate, formed the program at the meeting of the Progressive Century Club at the West End House, Eaton street. Several numbers were given by the English High School Orchestra, while the vocal selections were by the Misses Thompson, Weinstein, Claire, Drucker, and Frieda Putnam.

SURE NOW TEDDY, JR., IS ENGAGED

HARTFORD, Ct., March 29.—Members of a birthday party in honor of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., declare there is now no doubt of his engagement to Miss Carrie Munn, daughter of Mrs. C. A. Munn of Washington. Miss Munn has been here for three days with the party.

Last Fall gossips at the capitol linked the name of Miss Munn with young Teddy, but at that time he strenuously denied all reports of an engagement, almost repudiating an acquaintance with her. At that time his father was President and those who say the engagement is a reality see in that a reason for the previous denial.

MANY IN FIELD FOR ATTORNEYSHIP

A hot fight is already predicted for the office of District Attorney of Suffolk County when the question of electing a successor to District Attorney J. A. Hill comes up next Fall. Joseph A. Dennison, the organization candidate against the late John B. Moran, is understood to be in the field, though he will not admit it yet. Other Democrats mentioned include Associate Judge Edward L. Logan of South Boston District Court, Councillor Edward P. Barry of South Boston and Alonzo B. Moran, brother of the late John B. Moran. The name of Salem D. Charles of the Board of Street Commissioners is also mentioned.

JAP'S BRIDE HAS QUARREL WITH MOTHER

SEATTLE, Wash., March 29.—Archdeacon Emery has been called upon to pay handsomely for the advice sought from men learned in immigration and international law as to how his daughter could best succeed in taking unto herself a Japanese husband, Gunjiro Aoki—without violating the statutes and the laws of the land of her nativity.

A suit for $4,999 has been instituted against Emery by United States Court Commissioner Armstrong, whom Emery beseeched for legal advice relating to immigration and the rights guaranteed by treaty and otherwise to an Asiatic.

Commissioner Armstrong went thoroughly into the case and expounded the law, but Archdeacon Emery failed to pay for the legal advice given, and in consequence the suit was regularly instituted.

The writing on the certificate of marriage had hardly dried before differences between Mrs. Gunjiro Aoki and Mrs. Emery, her mothtr, arose, and the breach is growing with every prospect of such strained relations as will result in a permanent estrangement. The trouble grows out of Mrs. Emery's insistence that the bride and bridegroom live apart for a few days until the public has partially, at least, forgotten the principals in the sensational marriage.

Mrs. Aoki would not listen to the mother's plans, though the Japanese son-in-law, who appears susceptible to his mother-in-law's influence, seemed to rather favor the plan.

PIUS X. PAYS ARCHBISHOP RARE HONORS

ROME, March 29.—There is much comment here over the marked cordiality of Pope Pius' reception to Archbishop William H. O'Connell of Boston.

Pius X. was not yet quite recovered from his last indisposition, but when he heard that the archbishop had arrived he insisted on seeing him, and to emphasize his cordiality received him on the Feast of St. Joseph, his name day, when no other audiences were granted.

Archbishop O'Connell is highly valued at the Apostolic Palace, not only for his position in America and for his former sojourn in Rome as rector of the American College, when he made so many friends, but because of his knowledge of Japan, where he went in 1905 as the head of a special mission.

His opinion, therefore, is highly appreciated in connection with the organization of the Catholic church in the country of the Rising Sun, where the present pontiff wishes his clergy to reacquire the influence which they had in the past.

The Hotel Regina, where the Archbishop is staying, is the centre for prominent visitors, who go to pay their respects to the American prelate and discuss with him the most important questions of the American Catholic world.

The Archbishop has been most cordially greeted by Cardinals Satolli and Martinelli, two former Apostolic Delegates at Washington, and also by other members of the Sacred College, especially by Cardinal Gotti, the Prefect of the Propaganda, under whose jurisdiction America was until last November, and by the secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which now treats of the most important American affairs.

To-night's performance at the Park Theatre will be a benefit to W. D. Andreas, business manager of the house. This gives an added interest to the production, which is the first appearance in Boston of W. H. Crane in the new George Ade comedy, "Father and the Boys." Mr. Crane has a strong supporting company, including Margaret Dale, Ivy Troutman and Thomas Meighan. The two latter were in the famous "College Widow" cast, which had a ten weeks' run in Boston a few seasons ago.

ed and filed their nominations are all that one expects from boys who have the unequalled educational facilities which Boston affords, and their rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes show that the curriculum has not subordinated the other great essential of physical health.

Easy for All to Compete.

Now, then, schoolboys and schoolgirls of Metropolitan Boston, are your names in that list of contestants If not, why? If you are fourteen years of age and of good standing in your school, you are equally eligible to a privilege which in ordinary life might be available only to a Vanderbilt, a Gould, or some other fortunate child of great wealth.

What a simple matter it is!

Casual inquiry among your friends, all of whom read the BOSTON AMERICAN, will give you the necessary number of nomination blanks and your friends will certainly be very glad, each of them, to affix his signature.

Get busy to-day, everybody! When you cut your blanks from the papers, FOLLOW THE LINES AS CLOSELY AS POSSIBLE. Use a sharp knife or scissors. Do not tear the blank in a ragged way. You will understand how reasonable this request is when you stop, for just a moment, to think that a perfect shower of these blanks, hundreds and hundreds of them in every mail, are pouring in to the clerks in the Around-the-World Department. By arranging your blanks in neat packages you greatly facilitate the work of counting and very greatly reduce the chance of error.

When you read the list of nominations published from day to day, watch carefully and see that your name appears there. If for any reason it should be omitted, or there be an error in the spelling, or the address, or the city, or the town, write to us immediately and it will be corrected.

Make Up Your Mind to Win.

Remember that the most important thing you can do for the next few days is to get yourself thoroughly into that spirit and frame of mind which knows but one result—VICTORY. You can readily understand the need of absolute correctness in the name and address, so that when you, at least, are one of the lucky eight who will Race Around the World or to Europe, there may be no dispute by some competitor, who is just defeated by a close margin, on some technicality, perhaps.

A very interesting feature of the competition has been the number of letters which the schoolboys and schoolgirls are writing with their suggestions, and telling of their plans and what they mean to do when they make the journey. That's the right way to talk and that's the right way to act. The BOSTON AMERICAN is always glad to receive such letters from its young friends.

Send in Your Photograph.

Have you sent us your photograph or have you called and had it made? In the city of Chicago more than 1,800 schoolboys sent their photographs to the Chicago American. All were published. In the other cities the number was correspondingly large. You may call at the AMERICAN office at any time up to 5 o'clock, as after that it will be impossible, on account of the twilight, to make good photographs.

Let us repeat for the benefit of everybody that you are NOT too late. The boys and girls who have already qualified in no way have an advantage over you. Before this race is started the AMERICAN means to see to it that every boy and every girl is lined up free from interference and on an absolute equality with every other boy and every other girl. We will defer the time of closing the nominations to the last practical moment, but at the rate the nominations are being sent to us, this period must necessarily be limited.

You will be wise, everybody, to send your blanks in TO-DAY. DO IT NOW! Don't wait to see what some other boy or girl intends to do. Many of you have read in your copy books the old saw, "Procrastination is the thief of time." It is.

Here are fourteen more boys and girls who have qualified for Great Race Around the World and European Trip.

To the fathers and mothers who continue to write in personal letters, asking what assurance we can give that the escorts to be sent with the boys on their record-breaking world race and other trips to Europe will be satisfactory to them, the AMERICAN wishes to say that from the moment the boys and girls leave their homes until they re-enter them, and during every moment of their absence, they will be in such care and surrounded by such safeguards as their own parents would provide were they with them in person and in command of unlimited wealth.

Transportation Much Improved.

A splendid manifestation of civic pride and patriotism of old Boston and her environs is evidenced in the eagerness of the boys to achieve victory in this great race over the other fellows from New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Everybody knows that within eight years improvements in transportation facilities have been very great, both on sea and on land. The great Cunard liners Mauretania and her sister ship Lusitania now make the journey from New York to Fastnet Light in a little more than four days, whereas when Charles C. Fitzmorris made the present world's record eight years ago, it required almost six days for the Atlantic trip. The great Japanese steamships on the Pacific have also reduced their running time very much.

Away over in Manchuria the troublesome break in the great Siberian railway around the south end of Lake Baikal, which necessitated a delay of from four to twelve days, has been eliminated. Now when one leaves Vladivostok one goes right to Moscow and the Czar's own capital, St. Petersburg, without another change of cars and with a speed scarcely excelled on our own American railways.

Another feature, too, of the ride through this great country, Siberia, is that the railways are what is called broad-guage. This makes it possible to have there more roomy cars and a higher standard of luxury in travelling.

The boys will learn also that Siberia, far from being the trackless, snowy waste, and home of some few thousand exiled Russian peasants, is fast growing into one of the richest agricultural countries in the world with enormous wheat fields and some splendid cities.

How You Can Get Good Start.

Send in your nomination blanks to-day! Remember that we are waiting for you. We are holding back the other boys and girls who are eager to learn the next step. We are waiting for you. Fifteen nomination blanks each carefully cut from the BOSTON AMERICAN, each signed by a different adult will qualify you.

Get them in to-day.

Read the letters which are printed to-day and to-morrow and the answers which appear with them. Many a point and many a doubt which will arise in your mind will be cleared. A good many boys and girls are, perhaps, thinking your own thoughts and writing to us about them.

The AMERICAN repeats that if you care to write on any subject or about any part of this contest, it will be glad to receive your letter and answer it. Some of the recent letters received, with their answers, follow:

JEFFRIES SAYS O'BRIEN IS A WANING STAR AND KETCHELL IS A COMER

Jeffries's interesting views on the fast fight between Stanley Ketchell and Jack O'Brien form the topic of the big fellow's story for the AMERICAN to-day. O'Brien, in Jeff's opinion, is a waning ring star and his so-called rejuvenation nothing but an illusion. He makes it plain, however, that he doesn't wish to detract anything from the glory of Ketchell's victory. The lumberjack from Michigan, he makes plain, is a shifty fighter who is there with the punch.

By JAMES J. JEFFRIES.

THAT must have been a ripping fight over in New York between Ketchell and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien. I wish I could have seen it. I read about it. I call it a splendid exhibition of gameness.

It also demonstrates the pleasing fact that for all the black marks opposite Jack O'Brien's name he can fight on the level if he wants to do so, and that he is capable of taking punishment.

It also demonstrates the fact that Ketchell is not a boxer but a real fighter, who possesses a wallop and can stand up under a fierce cannonading.

I looked to see Ketchell get the decision. He had everything in his favor. But I didn't expect him to give O'Brien the mauling he handed out. Of course, it was the bell that saved O'Brien from having a clean knockout scored against him. Despite this technicality, however, Ketchell will be given credit by ring followers with having hung a sleep-producer upon the Philadelphian Beau Brummel.

It may have been that O'Brien's long stay from the ring proved too heavy a handicap in a ten-round go with a fighter like Ketchell, or it may have been that he was too confident of his footwork and ability to duck. At any rate, O'Brien was firm in his belief that he would go the distance, whether or not he could manage to put Ketchell out.

Farewell to O'Brien.

Just how much of a factor O'Brien will continue to be in pugilism is problematical. His abiltiy to take punishment as shown in the fight with Ketchell may mean that he is on his way back to his old time condition, and the gameness he showed may mean that he wants to do something to square himself with the public for the many lemons he sold. Personally, I'll be surprised if the fight with Ketchell is not his last appearance in the ring with an opponent of any ability or for as long a mill as ten or fifteen rounds.

He may take on some six-round matches just to keep himself in the game, but it is doubtful, I think, if he does anything more ambitious. Jack doesn't need the money that he might get from a big fight. He's pretty well fixed, is O'Brien. He has a fight club over in Philadelphia that will keep him in loose change and he has enough real estate in the Quaker City to supply him when he needs any big money.

Isn't that little Willie Britt the old joker, though? He crawled along the ropes to where the newspaper men were sitting, after the eighth round when Ketchell had missed two or three swings and was bleeding freely at nose and mouth and smilingly told them:

"I am going to turn the tiger loose in this next round. I've been holding him back for the finish."

Sure enough the tiger was turned loose. Little Willie sure must have thought he knew what he was talking about.

What! Another Offer.

I saw a sporting note in the AMERICAN that "Doc" Krone, the Chicago druggist, who sometimes referees a fight on the side, had been authorized by a London syndicate to offer a $75,000 purse for a fight between me and Johnson. If the "Doc" has such authority he is keeping it very quiet and has been unusually confidential about it. The only person he seems to have told is a Chicago correspondent.

For all I know Krone may be empowered to hang up such a purse. As long as I have no official notice that he is going to make the offer I suppose I shouldn't pay any attention to such a newspaper telegram. At the same time I can't help observing that all such stories and all the billion dollar purses that might be offered now wouldn't have any effect in forcing me to a premature admission that I will fight the black man.

The fellows who know me at all well know that I am not to be coaxed or tempted or in any way shaken from the stand I have taken in this question since it first came up. It's a waste of breath to try to get me to talk about it.

Jas. J. Jeffries

TERRY BOOSTS BROTHER PHIL

NEW YORK, March 29.—Phil McGovern and Joe Coster will clash in a ten-round battle at the Bedford A. C., Brooklyn, Tuesday night. They will weigh in at 115 pounds ringside, each having a forfeit for weight and appearance posted. Terry McGovern said to-day:

Phillie is better than I was when I defeated Palmer for the bantamweight title, and Coster will never go to the limit. He has the sleep producer in either mit, and we will go after Conlon when we polish off Coster. Young Corbett an dmyself will be in Phillie's corner Tuesday night.

BOXING TO BE REVIVED IN CHICAGO

And now the lid's coming off in Chicago. Packey McFarland is slated to start the good, old game going in the Windy City. The middle of April will see the fists flying in the great pavilion at Dexter Park. It is twice as big as Madison Square Garden, New York, and the first good match put on the boards will fill it, so hungry are the old guard for a sight and a sound of the thudding mitts. Packey is to have the honor of reopening the game, and they couldn't have picked out a greater card for their own town.

Packey is a credit to that berg. It is the intention to put him against Bert Keyes of Jimmy Thompson. The game will be kept clean, or it must never start, says the present Mayor. It was his objection to the old clique that has kept the game cobwebbed in the city by the lakes, and this time there will be no mistakes, because the launching of the good ship Fisticuffs will be brought about with a straightforward crew.

WELSH SEEKS FIGHT IN N. Y.

Freddie Welsh, the English lightweight boxer, who has been after Battling Nelson and Packy McFarland all Winter, is in New York prepared to post a forfeit to box either of these cracks at 133 pounds ringside. Welsh says that if Nelson will take him on in the East for ten rounds he will readily consent, and if the Dane will agree to a longer mill on the Coast he will bet $5,000 on the side that he can wrest the world's title from the Battler.

Welsh is extremely clever and has a world of confidence in himself. He has notified the National A. C. to match him with any of the lightweights at the usual limit. Meanwhile Packy McFarland has a chance to box ten rounds with Owen Moran if he will agree to weight 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. Moran under such conditions would concede lumps of weight to the Chicago pugilist, but the latter, it is said, will not meet Moran except at 135 pounds at the same hour.

Moran will take on the elusive Nelson at 133 pounds ringside in a ten-round bout at the National A. C., but Nelson, it is understood, insists on receiving $15,000, win or lose, for his "services."

This demand, which is regarded as preposterous, is taken to mean that Nelson does not care for Moran's game any more that he does for Welsh's and that he will not take a chance of losing his title, which he won from the aged Gans, unless he gets a chunk of money that will repay him for a defeat.

KRAMER IS TRAINING.

Frank Kramer, the champion bike sprinter, is training daily at the Velodrome at Vailsburg, N. J., preparing for the races which will start there early next month. His reverses at the hands of Jackie Clarke, the Australian, caused him to start earlier than usual to get into shape, as Clarke is expected back to this country this Summer.

IS KAUFMAN AFRAID TO BOX WITH SANDY?

Boston fight fans are greatly disappointed over the action of Al Kaufman in calling off his fight with Sandy Ferguson, which was billed for the Armory A. A. on April 6.

This announcement was made yesterday by Billy Delaney, manager of the big Californian, and the club immediately got into communication with Jim Barry, who will be substituted for Kaufman.

Hughey MacLean, manager for Sandy Ferguson, called up the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day to express himself over the quitting of Al Kaufman in the match. He said:

Kaufmann will have to fight Ferguson or quit the boxing game. Sandy will chase him to the other end of the country or to Europe and make him fight. Its a case of quit pure and simple. He was scared of Ferguson and was afraid of getting a good licking. We will go over to New York immediately after our date at the local club and challenge Kaufmann to his face, and will fight him the next night after meeting Barry if he will agree to it. Any terms he can name are good enough for us.

Last Saturday two unknown persons came to our training quarters at Northboro, and to-day we get word that Kaufmann and Delaney have left for New York. I believe that these two men were spies in the employ of Delaney to size up Ferguson, and they saw that he was in such good shape that Delaney decided to call the match off.

Ferguson will never stop going after Kaufmann to get him in the ring. I understand it was not so much Kaufmann's fault as Delaney, who fooled the directors of the club nicely by forfeiting the bout. He was offered all kinds of inducements to give up the idea of quitting, but he refused everything, knowing that Kaufmann was in for a licking.

I can't express myself too strongly on the way Delaney has acted in the matter. He has been in the game for a long time, but this case of cold feet will kill him everywhere in the country.

If Britt decides to match Ketchell with Kaufmann in New York it will sure be a bloomer, as Delaney and Britt are very close and neither would stand for their men getting a beating.

Delaney has arranged a match for Kaufmann with Tony Ross in New York on April 6, the same day he was to fight Sandy. Everybody knows that Ross is a second rater and Kaufmann could easily defeat him.

There was no possible excuse for Delaney breaking the match. Director Miah Murray talked with him over the long distance telephone and agreed to every request Delaney could make, but still he refused to keep his word to box Sandy.

The reason for Kaufmann taking a sudden departure from his training quarters at Highland Lake was a letter which came from Billy Delaney, who was in New York. Kaufmann received the missive on Saturday, and it demanded that he pack up immediately and come to Gotham, with the only explanation that Kaufman was matched with Toney Ross shortly.

Kaufman did not want to leave the Armory A. A. in the lurch, but was forced to heed his manager. He notified the club and told them of the cause of his sudden flight.

BOXING BITS OF NEWS

After the racing season closes on the Pacific Coast, April 19, Jim Coffroth will bill two fights a month, every other Saturday. Coffroth expects to be in New York shortly to confer with Johnson and Jeffries.

Bill Papke and Jim Flynn got $1,550 apiece for fighting a 10-round no-decision bout at Los Angeles last week. Papke says he is dissatisfied with the result—Flynn was given the newspaper verdict—and wants another chance.

J. Ignatius Finnigan, a St. Louis sporting writer, says he was the author of "The Life, Career and Battles of Battling Nelson," and that he will apply for an injunction restraining Nelson from publishing the biography in book form on the ground that the lightweight champion still owes him for the work he did. Finnigan says he will try to have the Battler's copyright declared illegal. Nelson denies that he owes Finnigan anything and asserts he wrote every sentence in the book, Finnigan acting merely as his stenographer.

Jim Corbett must have a good friend in F. A. Stokes, the Minneapolis millionaire sportsman, who wants to put up $10,000 on him the minute he is matched with Jeffries or Johnson. He cleaned up about $25,000 when Jim was active, which accounts for the friendship.

Bix Mackey, the Ohio featherweight boxer, is the most persistent little fellow. In spite of the fact that Abe Attell put him away in eight rounds he wants to get another match with the champion.

Tom McDonough, manager of Dave Deshler, says that Tommy Quill can have another match if he will make weight. Deshler can do 133 pounds easily.

LANGFORD BOXES IN N. Y. TO-NIGHT

After many weeks of idleness Sam Langford, the Boston colored champion middleweight, has succeeded in inducing some one to step into the ring with him, and to-night he will endeavor to subdue Morris Harris, a big dusky fighter from Philadelphia, at the Marathon A. A. in Brooklyn.

JACK O'BRIEN IS GRAND FIGHTER, DECLARES TAD

By TAD.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Phil Jack O'Brien is one of the greatest fighters of his weight that ever lived. No one will dispute that who saw his grand battle against Ketchell the other night at the National Club. Jack did two things that night. He made the biggest hit in his life for himself and made a fight that put the National Club back on its legs again.

Think of a fellow who has been out of the game for two years jumping in and battling Ketchell to a standstill. He did to Ketchell what Jim Corbett did to Jeffries at Coney Island. In both instances the clever man weakened before the heavy hitter and fell by the wayside. It was a glorious defeat for O'Brien.

There is some talk now of matching Ketchell and Johnson. He might beat Jack Johnson and he might not. The adds are against him. In the first place, it would be a very poor fight, as it is in no way an equal match. It would be a poor thing to look at, because Johnson is so much bigger than the Michigan lad.

The heavyweight champion is much taller, much heavier, much cleverer and much too strong for a little fellow like Ketshell to battle with. Some say that Ketchell is as big as Sharkey was when the latter fought Jeffries. No, he is nothing like it. Sharkey weighed 185 pounds at least, whereas Ketchell only tips 165 at the best.

It's a joke to think of it.

What Ketchell should do is to box Langford.

JOHNSON WILL FIGHT CORBETT

CHICAGO, Ill., March 29.—If Jeffries does not agree within two weeks to fight Jack Johnson the black fighter will sign articles for a match with James J. Corbett for the heavyweight championship of the world. This was the outcome of a conference between Corbett and Johnson, who met face to face for the first time since the colored fighter won the title.

Corbett looked up Johnson immediately after his arrival to talk fight and show the public that he is in earnest about fighting the negro champion. According to Corbett their little chat was pleasant, but businesslike, and it was not until Jim agreed to post $1,000 forfeit money, the amount to go as side bet, that Jack saw Corbett meant business.

When asked what he thought of Johnson's ability as a fighter Corbett answered:

"Johnson is a clever fighter, but he has done nothing wonderful. Burns never was a real champion and there were a lot of other men in the fighting game who could have beaten him, but Johnson happened to be the one to get the match and win the title.

"I don't think Jack has a punch. If he had a sleep producer in either hand he surely would have been able to make Burns take the count. He hit him any place he wanted in the closing rounds of their battle but he could not make Tommy take the count. I have been doing light training ever since I came out with the statement that I would fight Johnson."

John L. Sullivan's Column

Those who were skeptical what the outcome would be if Ketchell had gone through with the match with Jack Johnson are convinced now that it was just as well that the articles of agreement were never reached. The fight with O'Brien proved that Ketchell is not ripe to go after the heavyweight honors just yet. If he couldn't get away with the Quaker till the last bell, a fighter who has left most of his vitality in the ring and is about to be classed on the retired list, what chance would he have with men of the Jeffries and Johnson calibre?

The general opinion that Ketchell would not make a fit opponent for Johnson when the match was under fire was verified in the result of the bout with O'Brien. The Michigan Lumberman weighed in under 160 pounds. How would he look up against a heavyweight of 220 pounds. Unless he was a second Fitzsimmons, he would be so badly outclassed that it would be a joke fight. There was only one Fitz, and Ketchell will never have the same noddle, though he may have as heavy a punch.

Johnson does not appear to be adhering to his first declaration that he would meet one and all who defied him for the title, as his latest sidestepping act to all the challenges that have been fired at him would convey the impressions that his first proclamation was only to put himself in right on his arrival in this country. If he wants to fight, and that is what he has advertised as his business, he can get it.

There are a few candidates who are anxious to face Johnson in the ring while Jeffries is busy with his stage work who have backing and could command a good sized purse, and they have been active in taking Johnson at his word and going after him, but there is nothing doing for them now, according to the statement of the latest manager Johnson has acquired.

This matter of having a manager is a most important item in a fighter's line of business and is indispensible to his welfare. No matter how good a boxer classes he needs an executive head, and more than one ring individual has found to his sorrow when he tried to do both.

Good managers, of course, are as hard to find as champion fighters, and it's a rare thing for an indefinite hitchup between one and the other. As soon as a fighter begins to get into the limelight by winning some battles he forgets what service his mentor has been to him and cuts loose, but sooner or later is forced to tie up again with somebody who thinks he can do the job.

There is never any trouble for a fighter who made a reputation to find a manager, as the woods are full of them only too anxious to annex the position.

It did not take Johnson long to find out that he could not depend on his own personal efforts to keep him on the wave crest of publicity and there are likely to be a number of ex-managers to add to the collection that already claims the distinction.

PACKY HERE TO BOX WITH DAVE DESHLER

Looking like a winner, Packy McFarland arrived in Boston this morning to get ready for his match with Dave Deshler at the Armory A. A. to-morrow night.

He was accompanied by Manager Harry Gilmore, Jr., and Pat Kinnealy, his trainer, and the party immediately repaired to the Hotel Clarendon, close to the club headquarters.

Packy got the first shock when the clerk handed him Key No. "23" to assign him a room, but it took more than that hoodoo number to disturb the Westerner's good nature, and he said it was good enough for him.

It will be the second appearance of the Windy City boxer here, who looks like the best candidate in the sport to-day to go against the Dane for the highest honors in the lightweight division. He boxed Bert Keyes in January of last year at the Armory A. A. and beat the tough New Yorker to a frazzle in their twelve rounds of one-sided milling. Since then Packy has been across the country to the coast, taking on the best boys in his class and has yet to taste defeat. His recent victory over Leach Cross, the dentist boxer of Gotham, who was scheduled to outpoint Packy, shows that he going at his best and is in fine fettle to display his paces against Deshler.

Deshler is the strongest boy who could face Packy in this section of the country. He proved by his late wins over Kid Goodman, Kid Sullivan and Tommy Quill that he can travel with any lightweight in the business, and there will be many to pick him over Packy in the coming fray.

It is the classiest bout in Deshler's career, and he will not overlook the opportunity to take advantage of it. He has in his favor superior strength and should be able to outmatch Packy in cleverness and speed. As a heady boxer there are few who can compare with him. George Byers, the veteran trainer, has taught him a lot about ring matters and he has benefited, as was evident in his last match with Tommy Quill, when he was the short end, but made good.

Three six-round bouts will precede the main attraction. In the opener Jim Reardon of Brockton meets Tom Foley of South Boston; Young Dyson, the lively Providence scrapper, takes on Max Baker, and Young Nixon swaps with Tommy Rawson of East Boston, which makes up a well balanced card.

MAT STARS TO WRESTLE HERE

Emil Pons, the New Orleans wrestler, who claims the lightweight championship of America, will make his debut in this city Wednesday evening, when he faces George Bothner in a catch-as-catch-can bout at the Columbia Theatre. Bothner says he has considerable to say about the lightweight championship, as he won that title and never knew that he lost it. How Pons comes to claim the title is a mystery to George. When the two come in contact Wednesday night Bothner will find out whether Pons is of championship calibre or not.

Pons has been after George for over a year, but Bothner has been ignoring his challenges, as Pons did not have a reputation worthy of a match. The ambitious Emil immediately set about getting a reputation. His success on the mat the past year has been remarkable. He has upset the ambitions of men not alone in his own class, but in the welterweight and middleweight divisions, and now Bothner has to deal with him.

The men are in great condition and will put up one of the warmest struggles that was ever settled on a local mat. Bothner realizes that he has a pretty tough proposition on his hands and is prepared to wrestle all night if necessary.

JACK TWIN HAS FORFEIT UP TO BOX KETCHELL

NEW YORK, March 29.—Mike "Twin" Sullivan has posted $500 with George Considine as a forfeit for his brother for a match with Stanley Ketchell. The Cambridge boxer wants the fight at the middleweight limit, 158 pounds and he is so confident of defeating Ketchell that he wants to win the title. If Ketchell wint fight him at 158 pounds, Jack is willing to let Ketchell go in at catch weights.

The pair met once about a year ago and Jack Twin stayed twenty rounds. His brother, Mike, claims that Jack was not knocked out, but that he received a foul blow causing him to take the count, but which the referee said he did not see.

The last time that Jack fought Jack O'Brien they fought a twenty-round draw at Dawson City, although the papers at the time said that the former should have received the award.

IT HAPPENED IN BIRDLAND

RED SOX AND CHICAGO CUBS AT NASHVILLE

By BERT MITCHELL.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 29.—The Chicago Cubs followed the Red Sox into town this morning. All the Boston players were in front of the hotel waiting to welcome the World's Champions. All hands were grinning broadly when the Cubs climbed out of their busses. "Welcome to our city," cried the Red Sox men.

"Thanks, but what are you fellows laughing at," said the Cub's?

"We won't tell you, just step inside and get the surprise of your life."

Five minutes later the Cubs rushed out on the sidewalk. "Say, what kind of a snare is this, anyway," they yelled. "Of all the hotels we ever stopped at this is the worst."

Five Days at Nashville.

"You fellows are lucky. The Cubs only stay here three days. The Red Sox are booked for five days," and the players of both teams held an indignation meeting and cussed out the officials of their clubs for taking them to the hotel. Without mentioning any names it can be said without fear of contradiction that this particular hotel is the worst a ball team has encountered in fifteen years.

In the old days the South was rated for its poor accommodations for travelers, but nowadays nearly every city of any pretentions has a first-class hotel.

Nashville probably has one and doubtless it was the intention of the Red Sox management to send its players there, but some one got mixed up with the signals, and the result is really laughable. The best fun the Boston players got out of it was in watching the Cubs when they returned from an examination of their rooms. But, after all, this hotel business is only an incident. Ball players would growl if you gave them the very best in the land.

Morning Practice Only.

The program laid out by Manager Lake to-day was a good brisk practice on the Nashville Club's grounds, which are only a short walk from the hotel. The Red Sox can only have the use of the grounds for morning practice, as the Cubs hook up with Nashville for three afternoon games, beginning to-day. After the Chicago bunch leaves the Red Sox play two games here on Thursday and Friday, leaving here Friday night for Cincinnati, and opening there on Saturday for three battles with Griffith's Reds.

All our bunch continues to be in fine shape physically.

Tommy Gilroy, the left-handed pitcher of the Lawrence Club, who was drafted by Nashville, has just reported for practice. Tommy's home is in Taunton, and he has played in the New England League four or five years.

Will Play Wilkesbarre.

Fred Lake has received a letter from Malachi Kittredge, who will manage the Wilkesbarre Club this year. Kit says there has been agitation against Sunday ball there, but everything is now all right, and the Red Sox can count on a Sunday game at Wilkesbarre just before the team goes to Philadelphia for the opening of the championship season.

The ride from Memphis to Nashville yesterday was quite a tiresome affair, and required a change of cars. It must be said that to pass the time some of the boys played cards in their private car. The Red Sox quartette also got busy with a few choice selections.

DOVE BANTAMS LEAVE AUGUSTA ON PLAYING TRIP

By BILL ROSS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 29.—There will be some real ball for the Doves this week. The training season is about over. They break camp on Thursday, going to Athens, this State, to play a college team there, and the next day they will tackle some bush leaguers in Spartanburg, S. C.

The game on Saturday will be with the Greenville club in the South Carolina city of that name. But before the Boston National team leaves this town it will go up against the Augusta club twice, weather permitting.

To-morrow and Wednesday the Doves are to play the Tourists, as Manager Louis Castro's aggregation is called.

The Bantams break camp this evening. They start for Columbia to play two games in South Carolina's capital. Players who have worked at the ball park in that city say it is the biggest they ever saw. It was formerly the fair grounds and is half the size of Boston Common. It has the home plate so far from the grandstand that the umpire ought to use a megaphone to inform fans as to the ball and strike situation.

Moreover any ball that goes over an outfielders head is pretty nearly always good for a home run. The soil is a hard clay and the ball will pop along over it like a frisky kangaroo. The only thing which will stop it is the fence far away on the horizon.

No discreet ball player ever attempts to slide to a base along that diamond frontier. To do it safely he would require trousers built like an automobile tire. The Regulars are mightly glad that there is no such name as Columbia on their schedule.

Dovey Will Head Bantams.

President George B. Dovey will travel with the Bantams and Harry Smith will be captain and manager. He and Jimmy Ball will alternate as catcher and also on first sack.

Walt Thomas will play second and Tom McCarthy will be the man at third when he is not working in the box, which probably will be one game in four. When he pitches Jakey Boultes will play third sack. At other times Boultes will be frisking around left field. Charles Starr will be the shortstop for this team and for outfielders there will be Big Bill Chappelle, Al Mattern, Jack Donohue and Cecil Ferguson. This team ought to be called the twirlers. Out of ten men there are six pitchers.

Manager Bowerman thinks that it will be a good thing for these boys to go off on a tour of their own when nine of them can be in the game every day. It will give the pitchers more work in the box than they would have if with the Regulars and also help all hands to get a batting eye on the ball.

The pitchers who will travel with the Doves are Gus Dorner, Vive Lindamann, Tom Tuckey and Kirb White.

Peaches Graham Happy.

Big Mike and Peaches Graham will be the catchers with the Regulars and the latter is happy at the prospect of being in the game almost every day. There will be thirteen Doves in the regular squad besides Trainer Jimmy Neary. In all there are just twenty-four players on the club roster now.

Clarence Beaumont is the only one who has not yet reported. He has written Manager Bowerman that he wants to delay until the club reaches Boston. He was going to show up at Baltimore on April 10.

Joe McGinnity and the Newark team were sad losers after the battle with the Doves. The iron man pitched in midsummer form. He used everything he had during the game and sent up mighty few straight ones. He thought he would trim the Doves, who have seen straight balls only, with his shoots and curves, but his dope was to the bad.

All the Newark boys think they can make a great bid for the Eastern League pennant this season. It is a fast, hustling team and no mistake.

The Boston pitchers surprised them. When put to the test the three tried against the iron man showed some pace. Al Mattern looked especially good and he wanted to pitch the game out, but Big Mike said him nay.

Bowerman's work in getting his men up in "inside" work has begun to show, but the manager is far from being satisfied yet. He says it will take him weeks yet before he has the team going to suit him in that style of play.

FIFTH OAR IN HARVARD CREW IS FATED PLACE

Fifth oar in the Harvard varsity boat seems to be a fated position. Within a month two of Harvard's best oarsmen, rowing in this position, have been forced to retire, Severance on account of rheumatism, and this week L. Withington on account of blood poisoning in his hand.

Withington's loss will be severely felt by the Crimson, for the Honolulu boy, whose boyhood playthings were catamarans and surf shells, has had more experience on the water probably than any other member of the varsity. His brother, Paul Withington, and Hooper, are being tried out in this position by Coach Wray. Hooper has the call at present but Withington is giving him a hard fight for the place.

The makup of the rest of the varsity crew is practically settled. Sargent will probably hold down stroke, Waid 7, R. Cutler 6, Bacon 4, Faulkner 3, Lunt 2, E. Cutler bow, and Blagden cox.

In the practice last week the varsity crew rowed about 30 to 32 strokes to the minute and there was little check between the strokes. What check there was came just before the catch and was due to the fact that the stroke was not pulled in to the end as hard as it should be.

The balance of the boat was somewhat disrupted by Withington's withdrawal, but toward the end of the week this was righted. A slight tendency still persists on the part of some of the men, particularly Waid, Sargent and E. Cutler, to ease up on the finish with the body swing.

The chief source of power of the Crimson eight at present is the leg drive which Coach Wray has thoroughly drilled into the men. On the recovery, the slides are not handled particularly well. Bacon is one of the worst offenders in this respect. Coach Wray has been gradually increasing the length of the spins and racing the second crew against the first to develop speed.

HIGHBALL MADE INTO A PACER

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 29.—Highball a pacer. This is the most important move made this season in the trotting horse world. That the noted gelding with a mark of 2:03¾, the world's race record for geldings, and holder of the world's record for a green gelding of 2:06¼, made in 1907, will be seen on the turf in pacing events comes as a great surprise to horsemen.

Ed. Geers recently shifted Highball's shoes for light ones and he immediately took to pacing as naturally as a duck takes to water. He has already worked a mile at his new gait in 2:36, the final quarter in 33¼ seconds. There can be no smoother-gaited wiggler than he.

"If he stays sound I count Highball will pace right in two-minutes," declared Geers to-day. "My reason for changing him from a trot is that pacing will be much easier on the front leg that bothered him last Fall."

Asked about The Harvester, 3, 2:08¾, Geers said: "It is my aim to beat Directum's four-year-old race record of 2:05¼ the coming season. It's a big task, but it will be asked of a horse that seems capable of big things. Why, if he stays sound, I count he has a chance of lowering all trotting records for a stallion."

The AMERICAN is Boston's great home paper.

HORSE NEWS TRACK GOSSIP

Princess Ina, by Masconomo (2:10¼), that was sold for a long price after showing a mile in 2:17¼ as a 2-year-old, is considered one of the most promising green trotters in the string that Ed Geers is preparing for the races at the Memphis track. The mare had no futurity stakes, for which reason she has been brought along carefully the past two seasons.

C. K. G. Billings has decided to ship his entire stable abroad this Summer. Most of his racing will be done on English and Austrian tracks. Mr. Billings will spend part of the season with his entries in Austria, where he has nominated a number of trotters for big stake events.

The Angelus, a son of Zombro, 2:11, and Hazel McKinney, 2:09¼, will be named in the early closing slow trots through the grand circuit.

The Terre Haute track is about the earliest in the North. Knap McCarthy has already been a quarter in 35s over it with a three-year-old trotter.

Walter Cox's old bread winner, Ginger, 2:09¼, beat Merry Widow on the ice recently, pacing one heat in 1:01¾, which is believed to be a world's record.

Youngsters by Peter the Great continue to sell for high prices, and yet it was only a few years ago that the son of Pilot Medium was sent to the auction block by a New England breeder as practically a failure.

John E. Madden will experiment with the trotter-hackney cross as a means of producing carriage horses, but he will reverse the process used by hackney breeders and will mate hackney mares with the trotting stallion Vice-Commodore (2:11).

Few stables have ever contained more extremely fast horses than does Charles Tanner's stables at Glenville at the present time. Among the fast ones quartered there at the present time are Lou Dillon (1:58½), John A. McKerron (2:04½), W. J. Lewis (2:06¾), Tempus Fugit (2:07¼), Flemming Boy (2:07¼), Turley (2:07½), and Mr. Billings's recent purchase, Berta Mac (2:08).

Kingline, the sister to Bingen, is likely to add much to the family fame. In the string Frank Phillips is training at Macon for John H. Shults are two very fast youngsters of this mare.

Trainer Robert Proctor will have a whole lot of good futurity candidates in his stable the coming season.

YALE GIANT STORY STIRS UP HARVARD

"Unless there has been some misprint the statement given out by the Yale athletic authorities recently to the effect that Yale's average athletes in 1908 were 20 pounds heavier than in 1903 and proportionately stronger is absurd," said Dr. Dudley Sargent, physical director of Harvard.

"The statistics for the two years were not made up by the same persons in the first place and it seems very probable to me that the basis of comparison used in the two years was entirely different.

"I have entire confidence in the statistics of 1903, and in the gentleman who compiled them, but I have no hesitation in saying that the statistics of 1908, as published, cannot be correct.

"It is, of course, true that the college athlete is growing stronger and better developed each year. We have noticed this at Harvard. This development, like most other things, takes place gradually and not by revolutions. It is only very slight, so slight that the athletes of one year are very little different from those of the preceding year. It is only when the figures for a decade or two are compiled that the change can be noticed."

"Following on the heels of the announcement that Yale was about to adopt Fletcherism, these figures seem somewhat strange," said Dr. Sargent with a merry twinkle in his eye. "They are about on a par with an other announcement that emanate from time to time from Yale athletic sources, such as the one to the effect that Fletcher, a man of over 60 years of age, had beaten Yal'e strongest man in the strength tests.

"I have seen so many strange statements coming from New Haven about Yale's athletic marvels that I have long ceased to wonder.

"The Elis seem to have a peculiar method of their own of getting phenomenal results on paper. Dartmouth, Brown, Amherst, Williams and all the other New England colleges have a sensible system of statistics and no sensational statements are constantly issuing from those places.

"No comparative figures have been made for a number of years of the average athletes at Harvard but I know from observation and from isolated comparison at various times that Harvard gets about the same type of athlete that Yale does and that his development at Harvard is fully as fast as at Yale."

BOWLING ALLEY GOSSIP

Waltham Elks dropped back some in their fight for third place by losing three points to Chelsea, making the Watch City five now two points back of Medford.

The newly elected officials of the Laundry League are: A. H. West, president; J. Connell, vice-president, and D. W. Thurston, secretary and treasurer.

Archie Walsh hardly thinks that Paul Poehler is the whole push in local bowldom, as he has posted $50 for a $100 bet that he can take his measure in the twenty-string match scheduled for the Revere and Wildey alleys, ten strings at each place.

Hallas of Elite is booming his average in jumps these days. In his last match he rolled for a total of 351, tall stepping, to say the least.

Over in East Boston the fans are saying that Goodwin of Noddle has just struck his gait. This is by getting a total of 340 in the Adams Square game.

Hazel of Winthrop believes with "Pee Wee" Wise in at the two concluding games of the season the championship of the Elks will surely go Winthrop's way. He counts on their taking seven out of the eight points, meaning three from Boston and a cleanup from Somerville.

Cambridge took the honors in the Laundry League, second going to the E. & R. team. T. L. Powers earned the individual average prize and the high string single. Second individual average prize went to E. Gibbs, while W. W. Paterson scored the three-string total. Cambridge took away the trophy for the high team total, second prize going to the E. & R. bowlers.

When Chester Carruth can only roll for 247, it looks pretty bad, but the entire team was in the dumps, the total in the Elite game for Carruths being 1287.

* * *

Boston Elks have only lost two points more than Waltham, meaning that a brace in its concluding games, with Waltham up against some tough luck would give Boston fourth prize in the league.

RACES IN "BIG LINE."

David Ross, the Grand Circuit driver, will be in the game again this year with Elizur Smith, 2:11¼; Paderewski, 2:13¼; Kingston G., 2:26¼; Helen Tell, 2:11¼, and a four-year-old stallion by Klatawah, 2:05¼, dam by Grand Baron.

NEW RECORDS IN MAXWELL NON-STOP RUN

By J. C. KERRISON.

All world non-stop engine records have been shattered and a new mark established by the Maxwell four-cylinder, which is now headed towards the 10,000-mile mark. About 8 o'clock this morning the car, in the best condition imaginable, made the turn in Boston for Providence, having then negotiated 4,547 miles without a single mishap or the stopping of the engine for the slightest fraction of a moment.

This, of course, gives the long-distance record to the Maxwell, but just to show there is no hard feeling, and that the car can do even better than it has yet shown, she will be driven to the finish.

By 6 o'clock this evening the car will have shown 4,727 miles, and before another day has expired it will, things progressing as they have up to this point, be half over the alloted distance.

Race on Car Merits.

The drive of yesterday was most dampening, the rain coming in at thef ornt of the car, it being impossible to keep the glass front in position and drive with safety, the road in places being perfect quagmires. At times the car seemed to have a great attraction for the side of the street.

The use of chains have by themselves been denied the drivers, who propose to pull the car through on its own merits, without the use of anything that is not distinctly stock.

That brings to mind the fact that this car is a stock car in every sense of the word, ther not being a single thing on the same, save the speedometers, that is not found on the regular car when delivered to a customer.

To-morrow mornig there will be a change in the plans. Providence will cease to be the turning point, and the first trip will be made to Newburyport. It is possible that in the future the leading cities and towns around Boston will be visited by the car before it has covered the allotted 10,000 miles.

Road Race at Lowell.

It is understood that effoffrts will be made to hold a Lowell road race this year. John Heintz, who wroked so hard and energetically to make the last a success, is rather anxious to see the event duplicated, and feels that with the success of a year ago full in mind, there will be little objections to the same.

So far as the policing of the dourse by militiamen is concerned, it would be in view of the promises made a year ago by Governor Draper, seam as though little difficulty would be experienced in securing the services of the companies of the state militia quartered in Lowell and vicinity.

Heintz has already been assured of at least a dozen entries if it is decided to hold the contest. Included in the number is a car of the same make as that which won the last Lowell event.

The date of the proposed race has not been determined upon, but it is blieved that an interesting announcement regarding the next Lowell event will be made public within a few days.

De Palma Gets Cup.

The victory of Ralph De Palma with the Flat Cyclone in the 100 miles Minneapolis trophy race at Daytona on March 26, the final day of the beach carnival, setcled for all time the permanent ownership of the famous $2,000 cup.

According to the conditions of the deed of gift, it had to be won twice by an entrant in order to become the property of any one contestant.

Cedrino, with the "Cyclone," won the event of 1908, when he covered a century in 1 hour 50 minutes 20 seconds and secured the first leg on the cup.

De Palma followed up this victory in a fast race last Friday, and the cup will be placed in line with the many other trophies the Flat has won.

TO CAMPAIGN TONY SWIFT.

The sensational colt pacer Tony Swift, 2:09¼, the fastest three-year-old seen in the East in 1908, has been sent to Charley Dean to train and race this season. His record puts him in a hard class for a four-year-old, but his speed is so extreme that the handicap will be less severe than would otherwise be the case. As he goes free-legged, also, he may be expected to train on.

What Every Woman Knows

That Man's 'Ideal Woman' Isn't the One He Wants

By DOROTHY DIX

"WHEN I was married," said the fluffy-haired little blonde in the picture hat, "I was young and romantic, and just sloshing over with ladies' magazines' recipes for connubial bliss that were guaranteed to work like a rule for making sponge cake.

"The way I framed up a system for making matrimony one grand, sweet song, without a single jarring note, for about fifty years at a stretch, was for me to always be my husband's ideal.

"Ideal! Do you catch that word? It always sounds good to a woman and it sure did make a hit with me, and I got up early and stayed up late trying to be IT, and it would almost break my heart when I would fall down and my husband would give me some sort of a little josh upon my frailties.

"For instance, suppose I'd start down town to get me a warm, comfortable, durable, dark walking suit, and I would see a perfect love of a pink chiffon evening dress, and buy that instead. When I got home, and Dick would have to be told of how foolish I had acted, he would say something like this:

"Great Jehosaphat! and you are still out of the bughouse, and allowed to wander around the streets without a keeper! It certainly does get my goat!

"'Started downtown to get an everyday dress that you needed, and come poking in with a dinky little pink rag that you could do just as well without. Suppose it is becoming? Suppose it had been marked down from $90 to $89.98. What do you suppose would become of us if I started out to buy a bill of groceries for my store, and got sidetracked by some chocolate creams because they had pink papers around them?

Just a Few Final Remarks

"'But that's the way with you women. You've got no judgment, nor decision of character, and what the Lord put in your heads, instead of brains, when he made you, I don't know. It's past me, and that's no merry jest.'

"Whereupon, of course, it was me for the weeps, and every time I would put on the pink chiffon it would remind Dick over again of what a fool-thing I had done, and he would make a few remarks that he intended for humor, but that cut me to the quick, for I plainly perceived how far I had fallen below his ideal of what an 'intelligent woman should be.

"Same way about my toilette.

"'Why in the world you waste all that time singeing your hair with a hot iron, and making all of that frankfurter layout on the back of your head has got me guessing,' he would say.

"'Oh, I don't say it doesn't look all right, that is, if the feminine ideal of pulchritude in a coiffure is a scrambled delicatessen store effect, but what I'm after is the folly of you women wasting all the time when you might be improving your minds, by fussing with your hair and wearing a lot of flummery that it takes you 'steen hours to hook up with dainty little fastenings.

"'Why don't you just comb your hair plain like my mother used to wear hers, and have some sort of a loose dress, without any trimming on it, that buttons straight up before? Then you would be happy, healthy and comfortable, and would have time for some higher pursuit than tracking the bargain counter to its lair.'

Busy Being His Ideal

"When I would get taken in by a beggar, or he would come home and find me weeping over a novel, it was always the same handout. 'Heavens alive!' he would growl, 'but you are the champion easy mark of the universe. Say! when it comes to never growing up or cutting your wisdom teeth, you have got Peter Pan beaten a city block, and no mistake. If you were where your intellect entitles you to be, you would be in a perambulator, sucking a rubber ring and saying "Googly-goo" instead of being a married woman facing the responsibilities of life.'

"As I remarked before, I started out in matrimony with the noble object before me of always being my husband's Ideal of Perfect Womanhood. And, honest to goodness, I worked overtime without being able to pull off any results that entitled me to a blue ribbon as a prize winner.

"I cut out all of the frills and furbelows, and did my hair according to the diagram that he furnished of the way his mother used to wear hers, and he asked me what on earth was the matter with me, that I was trying to make a back number out of myself, and warned me that he wasn't keen on appearing in public with any frump.

"I cultivated a line of serious conversation that it would have been a liberal education to anybody to listen to—but he didn't seem to yearn for it as much as he did for the foolishness I used to talk to the pug.

Every Woman Knows It

"I heroically cut out the weeps, because he batted me for being a cry baby when a dress came home ruined—and he quit petting me.

"Oh, I was all to the good on the Ideal that had been held up as a model for me, but I got wise that Dick didn't seem to care to be around me as much as he used to, and I took note that he had quit bringing me home candy like he used to when I was silly and childish.

"Then it came to me that Dick didn't really object to my being silly. He liked it. He didn't want me to change. He wanted me to be like I was, a little, unreasonable, weak woman that appealed to him just because she leaned on him, and depended on him, and that he could scold and coddle and take care of and feel superior to.

"And that's what every woman knows. When our husbands get after us for doing foolish things they are simply having the time of their lives, and they wouldn't have us alter our ways for anything. We have been doing exactly what they wish us to do.

"Did you ever see a man who took care of an independent woman? Did you ever see a husband who had a wife who could make money, who worked for her? Did you ever observe a man being a slave to a wise, strong, capable woman? I trow not.

"Men don't work themselves to death to buy flannel petticoats and flatheeled shoes for women. They toil and rob banks to purchase pink chiffon and French slippers for women. The kind of woman who has men seven deep standing around her isn't the woman who asks them for their opinion on the Balkan situation, but who asks them, 'Oos ducky is 'oo?' It's not wise women who are adored by their husbands, but fools.

"Having torn off the astute reflections, I began to draw dividends on them. I became again the child wife, and did the first foolish thing that popped into my head, and when Dick scolded me for it, I wept on his breast and he kissed away my tears and told me how adorable I was.

"And the Dove of Peace doesn't hover over our establishment. It roosts right over our head."

He may like the independent woman, theoretically, but the clinging vine variety is the one that really pleases him.

Co-Ed Betty Must Play Her Plays Alone; but, Oh, for Just One Real Live Billy!

By NELL BRINKLEY

THESE are the days when the Smith Betties and the Wellesley Betties and the Vassar Betties play their plays and, in hood and gown, simulate the love that Spring brings into their hearts. But, oh, for a real live Billiam to play the part!

It's all very well, indeed, these mock heroics, these mock romantics, with the words of the immortals to inspire. But somehow it doesn't appeal.

And the stately co-ed and her little sister, Miss Dainty Co-ed, may play as much as she pleases, but when Billy is there she plays across the footlights and it's all the same in college as it is in the great greensward of real life.

No! My dear, college doesn't change it one littlest bit. The dignity of learning can never change Betty's heart. She will go forth and find her Billy, the one Billy, and straightway become just like any other—the Real Life Girl.

The Stages of Love

This Is the Fifth Stage—the Stage of Love at Sixty-five

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THEY were going on a journey—their second honeymoon, he laughingly called it—and her cheeks flushed delicately when he told her that she was just as pretty to-day as on that June morning forty-five years ago, when she laid her little hand in his and trustfully started out on life's journey with him.

"Ah, dear heart, we have passed many milestones since that glad day," she murmured.

"We have indeed, sweetheart, and we have seen prosperity and adversity, sickness and health, joy and sorrows, but always together, thank the dear Lord; always together!"

"Do you remember," she said, "the day that you came home and said that you had lost your position at the office, and I cried, and you kissed me and told me to cheer up; and then we cooked our supper, and how we laughed because you made the tea with cold water? It was so easy to laugh in those days!!"

Memories Sad and Tender

"Ah, yes," and his voice took a deeper note, "and I remember the morning I was allowed to steal into your room just to peep at you, and there you lay, with little Joe cradled in the hollow of your arm.

"You had come back to me from the valley of the shadow, bringing our little son with you."

"Our little son, our first born," she murmured, and her eyes filled with the slow tears of old age: for the first born, the bonniest one of all her flock, slept his peaceful last sleep on a sunny hillside in a far-away land.

"Come, come," he laughed cheerily, "this is a day for joy, my dear one, not for tears and memories.

"Let us just think of happiness. Think of the children. Had ever woman, with a tender, teasing laugh, such a wonderful collection of children and grandchildren as you?

She smiled and he patted her shoulder gently. "My April girl," he said, "to-day, just as forty-five years ago. For every day and hour of those forty-five years you have been to me a joy and blessing. Your sympathy and tenderness have been unfailing.

"In adversity, where other women might have faltered, you have walked buoyantly, courageously by my side.

"When I was sick and discouraged over repeated failure your cheerfulness upheld me and spurred me on to new effort. My success I owe entirely to you, my wife and helpmate.

The Praise of Loyal Wife

"And what do I owe to you?" she said softly, laying her pretty white head against his heart. "Was ever woman blessed with a love so great and tender as yours has been? Its gentleness and protectiveness have surrounded me like the flagrance of a flower since the day I gave you my troth.

"With all my little foolish woman's faults and frailties you have shown unfailing patience and thoughtfulness. No matter what the joy or sorrow, I knew I had you to turn to—that you were always there, full of infinite love and gentleness. Ah, my dear, I have been blessed among women!"

"We have waited a long time for our second honeymoon," he told her, gaily, "and instead of jogging quietly through the Summer dusk to a tiny rose-bowered cottage, as we did forty-five years ago, we shall go off in grand style in a fine motor car, but it can't be a sweeter journey than the first, can it, wife of mine?"

"No; no sweeter, but just as sweet," she told him happily.

"Yes, just as sweet, and filled with the sunshine of a great content; and when the last journey comes, and we two shall lie 'with our limbs at rest on the quiet earth's breast,' may my heart lie close to yours, you most enchanting of women."

She smiled, and he patted her shoulder gently. "My April girl," he said

Obligations of Invalids--- ....By.... Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Our minds are building unmade spheres,
And like a blessing or a curse
They thunder down the formless years,
And ring throughout the universe.

A LIFELONG invalid writes me that she finds human beings very thoughtless and selfish. She is confident that were she able-bodied and well she would be more considerate of the suffering ones of earth.

Observation has taught me to think the world in general very kind and sympathetic toward invalids, and invalids, as a rule, have seemed very inconsiderate of the people about them. I have seen scores of sick persons who were utterly oblivious of the fact that one in good health could become worn out, in mind and body, by continual drains upon the vital forces.

Two or three beautiful exceptions to this rule I recall with tender memories; lovely sufferers who lent a radiance to the sick room by the light within them, and whose constant thought was of others.

Not from such as these do complaints of the selfishness of the world come.

To my idea, lifelong invalidism is the result of either broken laws here in this life or in former lives. Nine-tenths of these maladies could be cured by a determined effort of combined will power and common sense habits.

Refuses to Take Good Advice

I know a beautiful girl, gifted with genius, and possessed of a score of admirable qualities; yet this young woman suffers from a delicate chest, and all the advice of experienced friends who urge upon her the necessity for daily exercise in deep breathing fails to induce her to practice it. She knows it is necessary, yet she forgets or neglects to fill her entire lung space with fresh air every day.

If she drifts into chronic bronchial weakness or pulmonary trouble she will regard it as a dispensation of cruel Fate.

It will be simply her own fault. She could develop robust respiratory organs by persistent effort.

The large majority of even sensible people are no wiser in the matter of avoiding or curing sickness in the first stages.

I have known a woman who was crippled, and a great sufferer from birth, to be a living sunbeam wherever she passed, and I have known a crippled man to make the whole world better for his having lived.

Both were full of praises for humanity; both found the human race considerate and kind and thoughtful.

Perhaps it was because they themselves were so full of unselfishness that they beheld these qualities in others. Most of our views of our fellows are a reflection of our own minds.

Rule Should Work Both Ways

From my own brief experiences with temporary illness I know how all absorbing our physical ailments become, but from my long experience with good health I know, too, how wearisome and enervating a continual recital of others' diseases becomes to the listeners.

Life is a perpetual demand for consideration of others, but it should not all be demanded of the well and strong, of the prosperous and the fortunate.

There is consideration due also from the sick and weak, the poor, the unfortunate.

Though you be a king upon the throne, and brave with health and rich with gold, and I weak and poor and ill, I have no right to demand all your thought and time and money; it is for me to remember that you have a thousand cares and obligations and duties of which I know nothing, and that if you neglect them for me I am helping you to violate a principle.

If you neglect to show me the human sympathy and kindness I believe my due, then I pity you, not myself; for as you reap you will sow. But let me not go through life, whatever my misfortunes, complaining of the selfishness of my fellow men, for that is to prove conclusively that I will never better my fate in this life, and that I will start with no brighter outlook in the next.

Pavement Harbinger

By WEX JONES

WHEN you leave the office building before the evening's dark;
When you hear the perky robin piping in a city park,
Silly robin, cheerful robin, disregarding weather dope,
Foolish, optimistic fellow, looking Summerward with hope—
Signs of Spring are these, yet mark you, calendar and bird may cheat.
Certain only is a wallop from a baseball in the street.

When you have a listless feeling, and to loaf's your only wish;
When you hanker for the country and a creek in which to fish;
When the florist's glowing windows your dull pavement ways disturb,
And the grimy raucous pedlar hawks dim violets from the curb—
These are signs that Spring is coming, with her footsteps light and fleet,
But surer is a wallop from a baseball in the street.

When you read the baseball gossip from the Southern training camps,
Don't forget the city youngsters who—so far—aren't champs.
The season bubbles in their blood—less lucky you than they—
And the bonds of steel and concrete cannot deaden all their play.
It's the city's surest signal that now the year grows sweet,
So, what's a random wallop from a baseball in the street?

"Ideal Men" of Girlish Dreams

IN response to an invitation by Beatrice Fairfax, many girl readers have written letters describing the "ideal man" of their dreams—the men they hope to meet and know and love "some day." Here are a few of their letters:

COURTEOUS TO WOMEN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My ideal has always been a man well proportioned, strong, six feet tall and masterful. Black, straight hair, clean shaven face, an aquiline nose, large mouth, square jaw and kindly gray eyes. His hands and feet are large. He is courteous to all women and square in his dealings with men.

E. P. P.

MUST NOT GIVE IN EASILY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My ideal man must be clean-shaven, dark complexion, about medium height, must drink very little, if at all; smoking not objected to; should be between five and ten years older than I. He must be very clean and neat, both about his person and personal belongings; he should wear a dark suit, preferred, with black, white, blue or lavender tie, no red; he must not give in to any of my whims if unreasonable; he must be attentive, but still not too attentive while out; he must be full of fun, yet not boisterous or silly in actions; he should be entertaining and also sedate when necessary; must say what he means and must not throw hints instead.

E. B.

NOT A CLUBMAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I like a gentlemanly young man, not necessarily good looking, but ordinarily so, considerate in many ways, and kind at all times. He does not know any signs of jealousy and controls his temper always. Should have a good position and be a home fellow (not a club member), and he should be one who never forgets himself, not even to use slang in the presence of a lady. One who knows that a woman should be shown every respect possible and at all times.

The Vagabond

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

GIVE to me the life of love;
Let the lave go by me;
Give the jolly heaven above
And the highway nigh me.

Bed in the bush with stars to see,
Bread I dip in the river—
There's the life for a man like me,
There's the life forever.

Let the blow fall soon or late,
Let what will be o'er me;
Give the face of earth around,
And the road before me.

Wealth I ask not, hope nor love,
Nor a friend to know me;
All I ask, the heaven above
And the road below me.

WEDDING RING FINGER

The idea that the wedding ring should be worn on the third finger of the left hand because "a nerve connects this finger with the heart" is of Roman origin, but, oddly enough, is not continued on the Continent as in England, for in France, Belgium and Germany, and most other European nations, the "engagement ring" finger is the third finger of the left hand while the "wedding ring" finger is the third finger of the right hand.

SOCIETY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Engagements and weddings are the all absorbing topics in society these days. The latest of the engagements is that of Miss Jane Stockton and S. Parkman Shaw, Jr. Miss Stockton, like her sister Ethel, whose engagement to Alexander Whiteside came out a few weeks ago, is a member of the Vincent Club. Mrs. William Amory is the only married sister. The brothers are Lawrence Mason Howard, Jr., and Philip Stockton, who married Margaret Head. Howard Stockton of the Somerset Club is the father.

Miss Stockton is tall, slender and dark, with a most aristocratic bearing.

Mr. Shaw is a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Parkman Shaw of Marlboro street and is a member of the Tennis and Racquet and Norfolk Hunt Clubs. He is a Harvard '05 man. His brother Herbert's engagement to Miss Alice Sohier was recently announced and it is said that Miss Ethel Stockton and Mr. Whiteside, Miss Sohier and Mr. Herbert Shaw and Miss Stockton and Parkman Shaw will all be married at Easter.

To-morrow will be the wedding day of Miss Margaret Stimson and Halstead Lindsley, which, though very important socially, will be exceedingly quiet. It will be Boston's only important Lenten wedding and will take place at Emmanuel Church.

Robert Livermore, Harvard '01, son of Colonel Thomas L. Livermore, who is engaged in mining with Mr. Lindsley in Colorado, will be best man. The ceremony will be followed by a wedding breakfast at the home of the Stimsons, No. 54 Beacon street. Mr. Lindsley and his bride will make their home in Telluride, Col., where the groom's mining interests are centered.

The first performance of "The Builders of Babylon," the musical comedy, is presented by the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard, for the first time, this evening in the club theatre on Holyoke street. The piece is original with three members of the club, Harford W. H. Powel, Jr., '09, and William G. Wendell, '09, having written the libretto, and John A. Warner, '09, having written the music.

In the cast are W. G. Wendell, G. Butler, R. M. Middlemass, J. P. S. Harrison, A. P. Loring, Jr., H. W. H. Powell, Jr., W. G. Roelker, Jr., F. Schenck, H. B. Barton, C. L. Lanigan, K. S. Cate, G. DeC. May, G. L. Lewis, Jr., R. H. Hutchinson, F. M. Blagden and G. P. Gardner, Jr.

STORY OF TONIGHT'S OPERA

"Lucia di Lammermoor"

By GAETANO DONIZETTI

THOSE who have read Sir Walter Scott's novels will recognize at once in Gaetano Donizetti's opera "Lucia di Lammermoor" that stirring Waverly tale "The Bride of Lammermoor." Incidently, it is the only grand opera with its scene laid in Scotland. The composer was born in Bergamo, Italy, in 1798. His father, recognizing the boy's talents, gave him a musical education, but when he insisted that the son devote himself to church music, the youngster promptly enlisted in the army. His military impressions came to the surface when about 1840 he composed "The Daughter of the Regiment," with its famous "Ratapian" song. Donizetti was a prolific composer and all but two of his works have met with a popularity which seems everlasting. Of all his operas, "Lucia" has the call in popularity. His last work, "Catarina Comero," brought out in Naples in 1844, was a pronounced failure and from that moment the musician's physical decline began. He grew sad and melancholy, and during the last three years of his life was attacked by fits of abstraction, which gradually intensified into insanity. He died in Bergamo in 1848.

"Lucia di Lammermoor" is in three acts. It was first produced in Naples in 1835 with Mme. Persiani and Signor Duprez, for whom the work was written, in the principal roles of Lucia and Edgardo. The opera was first sung in England at the Princess Theatre, London, in 1843. The period of "Lucia" is about 1669.

The Love Story.

The story of the opera, in brief, is that Sir Henry Ashton, brother of Lucy (as she is called in Scott's novel), has arranged a marriage between her and Sir Arthur Bucklaw (Arturo) in order to recover the fortune which he has dissipated and to save himself from the political peril which he has incurred by his activities against the reigning dynasty. Sir Edgar Ravenswood (Edgardo), with whom he is at enmity, is deeply attached to Lucy, who reciprocates his love, and on the eve of his departure to France pledges herself to him.

During his absence, Edgar's letters are intercepted by her brother, who hints to her of his infidelity. Finally, he shows her a forged paper, which she accepts as proof that Edgar is false. Overcome with gref, Lucy allows herself to listen to the suit of Lord Arthur.

The marriage contract is signed with great ceremony, and just as Lucy has placed her signature to the fatal paper Edgar appears. Learning from Lucy what she has done, Edgar tramples the marriage paper under foot, hurls an imprecation upon the house of Lammermoor ,and bursts out of the chamber in terrific rage. Sir Henry follows him and a fierce quarrel ensues, which results in a challenge.

Lucy Kills Herself

Meanwhile, after the newly-wedded pair has retired, a great noise is heard in the apartment. Attendants rush in and find Lord Arthur dying from wounds inflicted by Lucy ,whose grief has made her insane. When she returns to reason the horror of the situation overcomes her and death shortly puts an end to her wretchedness. Ignorant of her fate, Edgar goes to keep his appointment for the duel with Sir Henry. But Ashton comes not. Overwhelmed with remorse at the tragedy caused by his selfishness, he has fled. While waiting for Sir Henry, Edgar hears the castle bell toll. Attendants bring him the terrible news of Lucy's death and the despairing lover kills himself, ending the story.

It contains incomparably the grandest of Donizetti's arias for tenor, the Tomb song of Edgardo in the last act. One of the finest dramatic concerted numbers ever scored is the famous sextette, which is so thoroughly original and spontaneous that it may properly be classed as an inspiration.

The music of "Lucia" is of the most sombre character throughout. It does not contain one single joyous bar or phrase. At the same time it can never be charged with monotony. Every aria, though its tone is serious and often melancholy, has its own pronounced characteristics and the climaxes are worked up with great power. In the first act, for instance, the contrasts are very marked between Henry's first aria, the chorus of hunters, Henry's second aria, in which he threatens vengeance upon Edgar, the dramatic and beautifully written arias for Lucy and the passionate farewell duet between Edgar and Lucy which is the very ecstacy of mingled love and sorrow.

The Great Sextette.

The second act contains a powerful duet between Lucy and Henry, but the musical interest of the act centres in the great sextette ("Chi mi frena") which ensues when Edgar makes his unexpected entrance upon the marriage scene. For power, beauty, richness of melody and dramatic expression there is scarcely a concerted number of any composer to excel it.

The last act contains two numbers which are always the delight alike of both auditors and the great artists who have sung the roles—the mad song of Lucy and the magnificent tomb song for Edgar, which affords the most accomplished tenor ample scope for his highest powers.

Familiarity with the exquisite arias allotted to Lucy will readily forecast what to expect from Tetrazzini in the title part of Lucia. Mme. Tetrazzini may not be, to the eye, the girlish, etherial maid of Scott's drawing, but assuredly her wonderful coloratura soprano will more than overcome the optical disappointment by its eloquent appeal to the ear. The arias of Lucy were written for just such a beautiful voice as Tetrazzini's.

The Issue

By WEX JONES

There's an Issue stirs the people; they debate it more and more,
On the street and in the office and around the country store.
No, the tariff's not the subject; let them
soak it on to gloves;
Cosmetics, tea and stockings can stand
some upward shoves,
Free hides, oh, what about it, let 'em
come as free as air—
Though a heavy tax on hidings is the small boy's earnest prayer,
No, the tariff as a topic makes the conversation drag:
The issue that excites us is: Will our team
cop the flag?

Now friend with friend is wrangling, and telling what he knows;
Men contradict their comrades in a way to bring on blows.
No, the topic isn't Teddy, nor the things
he's gone to hunt;
Now he'll fool the fielding rhino with a neat and timely bunt;
Whether he will bite the lion or the lion
nibble him;
If he'll teach the hippopotamus a better way to swim,
Or lecture to the elephants about race
suicide—
Which they get by stopping bullets with an insufficient hide—
No, the people aren't worrying about the faunal bag:
The issue that confronts us: Will our team
cop the flag?

Wherever men are gathered, no matter where the spot,
You'll hear the crowd all talking as the argument grows hot.
No, the argle-bargle wrangling that almost makes you deaf
Is not upon the topic of Jack Johnson versus Jeff;
It has naught to do with those who scrap
within the cornered ring,
Or with the champions, black or white, or the challenges they sling.
The talk is not of Marathons; they argue not of Shrubb,
Or if the Indian honestly can make him
look a dub.
Such questions, great at other times, but interpose a snag
To fanning on the issue: Will our team
cop the flag?

As Mary Saw It

THE doubt of a university professor whether King Solomon, as the husband of seven hundred wives, is the best authority for the world of to-day upon such domestic matters as the treatment of children, reminds one of a story told so often by that great prelate, Archbishop Magee. A Gloucestershire lady was reading the Old Testament to an aged woman who lived at the home for old people, and chanced upon the passage concerning Solomon's household.

"Had Solomon really seven hundred wives?" inquired the old woman, after reflection.

"Oh, yes, Mary; it is so stated in the Bible!"

"Lor, mum!" was the comment. "What privileges them early Christians had!"—Answers.

SIZING THEM UP

Harry—Oh, some's bigger 'n others, sur.

Farmer Giles—What's the size of the biggest, then?

Harry—A bit bigger 'n the little 'uns.

THE ISLAND OF REGENERATION

A Remarkable Story of Adventure—The Romantic Tale of a Girl Robinson Crusoe.

By REV. CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

"THOSE clothes! Have you examined them?"

"No," said the chaplain; "it has been too dark in the first place, and——"

"I will look at them," said Mr. Whittaker. "Perhaps we may find some clew in them."

The lieutenant-commander stooped over the pathetic little heap of worn garments. The Bible lay upon them as if to weigh them down, and they had been placed well above the reach of the highest tide. The tide was then just coming in to the island. The Bible had been opened and laid face dowaward on the clothes.

Mr. Whittaker lifted it up reverently.

He observed as he did so that his own pencil, which he had left he now remembered with the woman, lay beneath the open book.

On the blank leaves between the Old and New Testaments something was written.

No mention of any writing had been made in the affidavit of the night before.

He lifted it, turned his back toward the east where the sun was just on the verge of rising, and studied it out.

"Do you find anything?" asked the chaplain.

"There is writing on this page," said the younger man. "I can just make it out."

"Man," he read slowly, studying each word in the dim light, "I loved you. In one sense, in your sense, I was unworthy of you perhaps, but not in mine. You alone had my heart. The past was a frightful mistake for which I should not be blamed, but for which I must suffer. I tried you with the world by your side. The world was kind, but you were not.

"You broke my soul and killed something within me which I had thought dead, but which you had revived. No power could revive it again.

"I cannot marry Langford, for I do not love him. I will not marry you, for you do not love me. I will not go back to the world now. I have no desire to do so, and I cannot live alone with you upon the island. You will not go without me, and so I will go first by myself alone. You will think of me, I know, in the great world.

"Perhaps you will judge yourself harshly, but I do not judge you at all. You did not know, you did not understand. It came too suddenly upon you. You cannot forget me, but do not repine over me, and remember to the very last I loved you. Good-by. May God bless you and may he pity me!"

Underneath she had written the impersonal name which he had loved to call her, "Woman."

So characteristic was the letter that that subscription was supererogatory, thought Mr. Whittaker. Only a woman could have written it.

She had gone out of his life, because with her in it there was no solution of it for him, because—how pitiful it sounded there in the gray of that morning in that lone island to those two men!—because he did not love her.

And she had gone out of it with excuses for him on her lips and love for him in her heart.

No wonder that divining this which he had not seen, realizing only that she was gone, he had been stricken as he was.

The doctor arrived presently. He ordered the man, still unconscious, to be taken back to the ship where he would do what he could toward reviving him and pulling him through this great and terrible crisis that had come upon him.

The chaplain went with him, conceiving his duty to be in attendance upon the living rather than searching for the dead.

The captain, with the other officers, brought 100 men to the shore. The island was systematically searched. It was all open. There was no place of concealment, but not a foot of it was left unvisited.

The woman had vanished and left no trace except the grass tunic in her cave, the remains of her toilet articles, her scissors, knife, watch and Bible and the little heap of clothing on the sand. All these they carefully gathered up and took back to the cruiser for the man.

In the search, and made quite frantic by the necessity of it, Langford joined.

Taking with them the evidence to substantiate the woman's affidavit and to establish, if so be it were possible, the man's claim, and taking with them also the bones of his mother, not forgetting what remained of the faithful dog, which the captain caused to be exhumed from the ruined boat, as night fell the Cheyenne steamed away to the northeast, followed not long after by the Southern Cross.

The two vessels went slowly, as if the souls that animated them were reluctant to leave the gemlike island where they had chanced upon so much that was idyllic, so much that was romantic; and where they had seen so great a tragedy of misfortune and despair.

Below in the cabin, under the care of the surgeon and chaplain, lay the islander in the frightful throes of a racking fever of the brain. He babled of the woman and knew not where he was or whither he was being borne.

ADVICE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A STRAIGHT TALK IS BEST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For several years I have been deeply in love with a beautiful girl, but recently a severe quarrel occurred which has not been forgotten, and although I desire to resume the old friendship, do not know the proper method to adopt.

I am about thirty years old, a college graduate, now earning about $2,000 a year, with good prospects for continued advancement in my profession; have no bad habits and have tastes which belong to a man of earnest, sober mind, with a preference for domestic life, while she is about twenty-six years of age and of a lively temperament, has decided views and is inclined toward fashion and society. She is a woman of exquisite taste in dress. She is very high-spirited and possesses a strong will and it is necessary that I command her respect while attempting to regain the old place in her affections. I feel she is the "one girl" for me and I must, if possible, win her. D. L.

YOU both seem sensible people and I think your best plan would be to have a quiet talk and thresh the whole question out. It is a shame that a foolish quarrel should end the happiness of two people who care for each other. You must meet her half way and each give in a little bit.

DO NOT ASK AGAIN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been in love with a certain young man for a long time, but he is rather indifferent to me. I have asked him to call on me several times, but he never asks to come again. I want to know whether I am doing a foolish thing in asking him to call on me. I am young and want to know what to do. M. W.

I WOULD not ask him again if I were you. You have given him a cordial invitation, and he knows that he will be welcome. That is quite enough, and he will call if he wants to.

GIRL MAY BE SHY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young man attends an evening company and has the pleasure of meeting a young lady whom he becomes attached to and likes very much. He accompanies this young lady home, but no invitation to call is extended, although the young man feels she would like very much to have him call. Now, would it be the young man's place to ask permission in an instance of this kind, to call? If so, how should he approach her on the subject? "PERPLEXED."

IT is impossible that the girl is shy, and I think you could tell her that you would like very much to call and that would give her the chance to invite you. It is usually the girl's place to ask the man to call, but I think your case is unusual.

A FAITHLESS SWEETHEART

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty years old and have had a good education. I have been going with a young girl for three years. She is two years my junior. I am deeply in love with her.

I have been out of the city for the past nine months. Upon my arrival last week I heard that she was keeping company with another young man and scheduled to be engaged next month.

Kindly advise me how to win back her love. S. H.

THERE is nothing to do but enter the lists and try to win her love again. She is a fickle young woman, and I think you are just as well off without her; but if you care for her very much you might as well try to regain her affection. As long as you were not engaged, you have no real claim on her, you know.

HIS VIEW

The Employer—Young man, I don't see how, with your salary, you can afford to smoke such expensive cigars.

The Employee—You're right, sir—I can't. I ought to have a bigger salary.

Give the Little Ones Variety

Serve Puffed Wheat one morning and Puffed Rice the next. See which they like best.

Don't serve any one cereal too long. Everybody likes a change.

These two grains are the world's best foods. But never before were they prepared in such an enticing way. Never were they made so digestible.

Think of whole wheat or rice grains puffed to eight times their natural size. Made so porous and crisp that they melt in the mouth.

But you can't imagine how good they are. They will surprise and delight you. For breakfast or luncheon.

Foods Shot from Guns

Quaker Puffed Wheat 10c. Quaker Puffed Rice 15c.

They are made by this curious process: The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into bronze metal guns. The guns are sealed, then revolved for an hour in a heat of 550 degrees.

The heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes terrific. Then the guns are fired. Instantly every starch granule is blasted into a myriad particles. The kernel of grain is expanded eight times. It becomes porous and crisp. Yet the coat is unbroken; each kernel is shaped as before.

TAFT DROPS INCOME TAX IDEA IN FEAR

By ALFERD HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Mr. Taft, during his leisure moments, gave himself up to dalliance with an income tax idea. He was aided and abetted by Congressman Stevens of Minnesota. Mr. Wickersham, Attorney-General, was asked to make the ground plans of a measure that would stand every legal test.

Word of these White House income tax doings began to get into the papers. The word proved alarming to Mr. Root and Mr. Knox, who are Mr. Taft's chancellors of politics and keepers of his party conscience. They hurried to Mr. Taft with a warning. An income tax would send the party chances of carrying the next House keel up.

Mr. Taft knows Mr. Root and Mr. Knox very well, but still not well enough to doubt their words or challenge their opinions. Wherefore, he became properly frightened at their gloomy prophecies of rocks ahead in the event of an income tax persistency on the White House part. His alarm took the form of sending for Mr. Stevens. It was the White House desire that Mr. Stevens assume whatever of opprobrium attached to the income tax movement, and confess himself father thereof. Mr. Taft's presidential skirts must be kept clear of every income tax stain.

Mr. Stevens arose in the House and declared that he alone was guilty. He had talked with Mr. Taft concerning an income tax, but the latter had done no more than just innocently listen.

Aldrich Chief Remonstrant.

It was Mr. Aldrich who set Mr. Knox and Mr. Root to remonstrating with Mr. Taft. Mr. Aldrich had said his own say in the business, but Mr. Taft would pay no heed to him. Mr. Taft has proven more amenable to the advice of Mr. Root and Mr. Knox, and his orders to Mr. Stevens to "assume the pressure" justifies the Aldrich sagacity in stirring Mr. Knox and Mr. Root to action in the affair.

None the less it is believed that next December Mr. Taft will send in a special message urging an income tax. He will do this not because he wants to, but because he must. A deficit, and particularly a growing deficit, is not to be denied. Money must be had, and if the tariff will not produce it then as between a bond issue and an income tax, Mr. Taft will prefer the latter.

In a recent letter I spoke of the prohibitive duty imposed upon zinc ore by order of Mr. Cannon. Mr. Clark in his speech gave the story in full. Mr. Cannon, it seems, was making a speech last Fall at Joplin, in the zinc ore corner of Missouri. This is what he said:

"If the Republicans carry the House I will be Speaker. If the Democrats carry the House Champ Clark will be Speaker. If I am Speaker I will see that a tariff is placed upon zinc ore. If Mr. Clark is Speaker zinc ore will be kept on the free list. A vote for Mr. Morgan, the Republican candidate for Congress in this district, is a vote for me and a duty on zinc ore. A vote for Mr. Hackney, the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, is a vote for Champ Clark and to put zinc ore on the free list. You may take your choice."

The Payne Bill's Real Aim.

The nubbin is this: The duty which Mr. Cannon seeks to put on zinc ore isn't meant to produce a revenue, but to exclude the ore. Also it is a specimen of what Mr. Cannon and the Republicans are doing in forty tariff directions. This Payne bill is not a bill to produce a revenue for the government. Rather, it is a measure meant to render a list of rich private interests richer still. In this zinc ore connection Mr. Cannon does not make the slightest effort to conceal that truth.

REAL ESTATE MORTGAGES IN BIG INCREASE

Over $100,000 more in mortgages on real estate securities were placed during the past week than during the corresponding periods of both 1908 and 1907, this largely being due to the present easy tone of the money market. Not only did the number of mortgages and their aggregate amount increase, but the number of sales and other transactions increased over the same weeks of the two previous years.

West and South Ends.

Sales and transfers of property assessed for a total of $96,000 were reported in the real estate market to-day. The great bulk of the dealing was in property in the West and South Ends, although one large sale is reported from Charlestown.

The estate at No. 88 Warrenton street, between Tremont and Eliot streets, including a six-story brick building and 2,337 square feet of land, all taxed on a valuation of $22,000, has been sold by the Thomas Haviland estate to Samuel Brown. The land is assessed for $8,400.

In Charlestown the four frame houses, a three-story brick house and 10,617 square feet of land, at Nos. 407-413 Main street, corner of Nos. 1 and 3 Albion place, all taxed on a valuation of $27,400, have been sold by Martin V. B. Hersom to Joel H. Lucas. The land is assessed for $12,800. This property was bought a week ago by Mr. Hersom from the Edward T. Noble estate.

Realty Proves Active.

The same grantor has sold to Rose Sugarman the four-story brick house and 900 square feet of land at No. 31 Minot street, corner of Billerica street, West End, all taxed for $10,100, of which $3,600 is on the land.

In the same section of the city the property at No. 7 Russell place, off North Russell street, including a three-story brick house and 727 square feet of land, have been sold by Jacob L. Wiseman to Odel Rivitiz. The estate is assessed for $4,500, of which $1,500 is one the land.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

HIGH RECORDS IN WALL ST.

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Tertified by the strength of the market on Saturday, a large short interest began covering in Wall Street to-day, with the result that prices were sent to high record figures.

In several cases the highest prices of the year were recorded, notably in Southern Pacific, which sold at the highest price in its history, when it touched 122⅝. Union Pacific sold at 184, St. Paul at 147⅝, Reading at 135¼, Copper shares were active and shared in the improvement. Smelters was the leader of this group and sold at 88⅝.

Amalgamated Copper touched 74½. In connection with these shares it was reported that large bids for copper metal were being made secretly by consumers. National Lead was the leader in the group of specialties touching 83. A net gain of 3 points. Its strength is due to the continued report of improvement in the lead trade.

At midday stocks were at about the best prices of the session, with Union Pacific selling to 184½, the highest price it has touched this year, and Southern Pacific at 122⅞, the highest price it has ever sold in its history. The improvement in the copper shares became more pronounced when the New York Metal Exchange advanced the price of copper metal ⅛ of a cent a pound. In the traction group Brooklyn Rapid Transit attracted attention by advancing one point to 73⅝, while Interborough Metropolitan preferred declined nearly a point.

BROAD AND ACTIVE MARKET

STATE STREET—Noon—Interest centred in Amalgamated, North Butte, East Butte, American Telephone and United States Steel this forenoon. The market was broad and active, although top prices were not maintained toward the noon hour. Saturday's bulge brought in some sell orders this morning, but the market was broad enough to take care of them. Traders also sold a few stocks and scalped profits.

The Active Features.

Manipulation was manifest in North Butte. Opening at 72½, it rose to 72¾, with subsequent loss to 71¾. Amalgamated opened at 74⅝ and eased to 74⅛, with subsequent recovery. Trading in this stock was mainly arbitraging with New York. Paine was a seller of East Butte, which declined from 15⅜ to 14¾. Greene-Cananea touched 10⅞, but ran off to 10⅛, with Power the principal seller. Lake Copper touched 20 and Calumet & Hecla was up to 630 sales.

Other Active Spots.

American Telephone was in good request and advanced to 131¾. U. S. Steel rose to 47 with slight setback. Bonds were quiet but firm. American Telephone convertible 4s stiffened slightly to 96¾. American Zinc 6s were 101 bid and U. S. Coal and Oil 6s were quoted from 131 to 136.

Strong Curb List.

Business on the curb was active with better prices. Bay State Gas, Davis Daly, First National and Ohio Copper were the features. More interest is manifested in the curb market now that this body has got to a business basis.

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, March 29.—There is a better tone in the stock market than there was a week ago. The movement of the price average in both the industrial and the railroad stocks has been generally upward. Prices are now less than two points below the best figure of the year, and there has been a rally in the case of the railroad stocks of nearly six points from Feb. 23, while the gain in the industrials has been almost as large.

It is difficult to say exactly what stimulated the movement of stocks. It may have been that tariff legislation at Washington is developing along old familiar lines. The Senate is understood to be preparing its own bill, and that has always been the bill which subsequently became law. The market certainly believes that when the new tariff finally emerges, the amount of revision downward will not be large enough to exercise any real market influence.

Bank clearings make a fair showing and indicate a reasonable amount of retail activity. In this respect there has been an improvement, although business is quiet.

A market that has been dull so long broadens gradually on rising prices. Buying orders from miscellaneous sources did not follow Union Pacific over 180, because the trading mind has been accustomed to see only two or three-point fluctuations back and forth, and the rise which left the stock between 180 and 181 suggested a reaction. Gradually, however, the eyes become used to it on the higher level, and a further advance might be followed up with interest. Exactly the same thing could be said of Steel common, or Southern Pacific, or Amalgamated Copper, or any one of ten different stocks in which leadership naturally is expected.

Specifically it cannot be questioned that a sustaining and indeed impelling force of immense power in financial concerns is the increase in earnings now being shown by so many of our leading railroad companies. It may be that much more encouraging railway reports are received from the western part of the country than from the East, just as general business seems to be more flourishing west of the Alleghany Mountains now than in the seaboard and distinctly manufacturing districts. But the argument seems justified that a disparity of this sort cannot be long continued when the agricultural portion of the country is in such a prosperous state that the Atchison Railway Company, for instance, can make as it did last week such a showing of earnings for the month of February as an increase of $463,000 in gross and of $412,000 in net.

The railroads have been and are still holding off their orders from the iron and steel companies in the hope that in the course of the present unsettlement in the steel trade they will be able to buy materials at lower prices than have yet been quoted; but it appears that these prices are already as low, all things considered, as have been known in the last decade, if indeed they are not lower than those quoted in 1893. The great bone of contention, we are told, is the matter of the price of steel rails, and it is said that large orders of steel rails would be placed if the rail makers would consent to make a lower figure therefor than $28 a ton.

The issue of five per cent. bonds (probably to the amount of $10,000,000) referred to in connection with the financing to be done at some time in the not distant future by the Corn Products Refining Co., has been under consideration by the directors for several weeks. The plan has been evolved with a view to providing funds for extensions, improvements and betterments, payment for which has heretofore been made out of earnings, thus placing the company in a position where it can distribute to the preferred stockholders at least a part of the accumulated dividends, amounting to somewhat more than $1,000,000. It is said also that the new bond issue will provide for the retirement at maturity of all of the underlying bonds. The present bonded indebtedness of the company and its subsidiaries is $11,851,480.

The president of an industrial corporation using a large amount of copper in its business says: "I have bought some copper at 12⅝ cents, but only enough for current needs." The man who made this statement is regarded as an expert buyer of the metal, and he makes no denial of his belief that copper will be higher in June and July than it is at present. As to why he does not buy enough now to last him through the next few months, the answer is simple. His company, while possessed of sufficient working capital for ordinary purposes, is not in a position where it can tie up any large portion of its funds in the purchase of copper or similar material beyond current requirements. It might resort to borrowing, but as its business is away below the normal, it could only raise loans by paying what the management would regard as too high a rate of interest.

It is an interesting question to-day whether the speculative buying of copper at this time is of the kind which Wall Street supposed the speculative buying was in the early part of 1905, or of the sort which it actually proved to be. On that depends whether, when consumers begin to anticipate their wants, they will find a bare or a well-stocked market.

Are We Getting Taft Revision?

Or Must the Tariff Come to a Veto, with the People's Labor Lost?

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

It was in good old Maine, long before his nomination as Republican candidate for President, that Mr. Taft made clear and strong his general view of tariff revision. He was a protectionist.

But he was opposed to the unreasonable protection which burdened the cost of necessaries of life to the average man and woman without compensating advantages.

On that issue Mr. Taft was superior to his party. Where it was clouded, he was clear. Where it was flabby, he was firm. And the promise of tariff revision made by the Chicago convention was made to fit the candidate rather than the party's record.

In the working out of the campaign the country was led to accept the Taft attitude as the Republican party's position.

As President-elect and as President Mr. Taft was able to lay down to Speaker Cannon and the Cannon forces in Congress the alternatives of making a Taft revision of the tariff or losing Administration support in the Speakership and rules struggle. And the Speaker, with Payne, Dalzell, et al., presumably conceded Taft revision rather than challenge Taft opposition.

But now the INSINCERITY OF THEIR SURRENDER is coming out in the wash. The changes in the tariff are not being made in accordance with the Administration policy.

It cannot be said that the proposed tax on tea, the schedules of imposts on gloves and hosiery, the duties on wool and woollens, are consistent with Mr. Taft's generally expressed views. These are common necessaries of life of particular importance to MEN AND WOMEN OF MODERATE MEANS. But instead of REDUCTION, they are menaced with EXTORTION.

Representative Payne did not offer a banal impertinence only to the rich women of the land when he said:

"Women could get along without the kid gloves, or fewer pairs of them, use silk gloves and cotton gloves, and all that sort of thing. They could keep their hands warm, although they could not cover their pride."

Here is a case where the ladies do not need the ballot to make their resentment felt. Payne's stupid fling will be resented by husbands and fathers.

Of course, Mr. Taft did not devise the schedules. That is the business of Congress. But whether the theory is that he is the President of the people or the Republican President, it is logical, and not only logical but NECESSARY, that Congress should be given in a supplemental message some definite and specific suggestions exemplifying what Taft revision means.

The President made his tariff enemies his reluctant tariff revision exponents. ARE THEY KEEPING THEIR AGREEMENT? If not, must this great matter drift into the cul-de-sac of final veto power, with the people's labor lost?

Where Was Saint Patrick Born?

In France We Believe, Although Doctor Parkhurst Thinks Otherwise.

In connection with the observance of St. Patrick's Day the American published an editorial and an article by Dr. Parkhurst—both dealing with the noble character of St. Patrick. The editorial said that St. Patrick was born in France. Dr. Parkhurst thought he was born in Scotland. A number of friends have written in to point out "a discrepancy."

The American editorial is free to confess that it does not actually KNOW where St. Patrick was born. The great and important thing is that he WAS born. We think that he was born on French territory and print a letter from Mr. Patrick Egan which seems to confirm that idea. The various histories that we have seen locate the birth of St. Patrick in France, and the British Encyclopedia confirms the statement. Mr. Patrick Egan's letter follows:

Editor American:

Dear Sir—I perceive that our good friend, Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, whose kindly and manly sympathy with Ireland in her struggle for the right I have always most cordially appreciated, in his admirable article in the American on St. Patrick, falls into one serious error—relying, no doubt, upon the authority of Joceline and Dempster, the first of whom I believe he will find to have been a romancer, and the latter a pirate, who tried to steal several other saints as well, and make Scotchmen of them—in the following paragraph:

"For every Irishman knows that St. Patrick was not an Irishman, but a Scotchman, born near Dumbarton, we suppose, and of rather distinguished social position."

Upon more careful investigation, I think the reverend doctor will find that the overwhelming preponderance of evidence shows the saint to have been born in Britony, France, about the year 373, captured by the Irish, who under their king invaded Britony in 389, and held in slavery as a swineherd for six years—under the shadow of the mountain Slieu-Miss, in County Armagh, so graphically described in the Doctor's article.

As conclusive proof of his birthplace I refer to the early Christian hymn written by St. Fiech, Bishop of Sletty, a contemporary and, I believe, a disciple of St. Patrick, commencing, in the Latin version:

Natus est Patricius nemturri (Heavenly Tours)
Ut refertur in historiis,
Fuit annorum sedecim
Quando ductus in captivitatis aerumnas.

Also to the writings of Probus, a contemporary of the immediate successors of St. Patrick, as well as to Colgan and others who have established to the satisfaction of the entire Catholic world St. Patrick's French origin. Yours very truly, PATRICK EGAN.

How Did We Profit on This Deal?

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

A little news item from Ottawa, Canada, told of a train of bonded cars, carrying silks and Oriental products worth $2,000,000, passing through there on its way from Vancouver to New York.

It was a concrete example.

If these rich goods were imported by American merchants to sell to American consumers, the American consumers will pay the cost of transportation across the Pacific and across the continent.

But, not being carried in an American ship, we not only have to pay a foreign ship, but the Canadian Pacific Railway.

How did we profit in this instance by our national failure to give government impulse to our merchant marine?

Light in the Eye

By Garrett P. Serviss

SURGERY has always been famous for the delicacy of its instruments, and no branch of surgery demands more exquisite implements than that of the eye.

But it is not only cutting tools that the oculist needs; he must also enlist light in his service. It is often necessary to flood the eye with light, and the ophthalmoscope for many years has served that purpose.

It is not perfect, however, and recently a very ingenious instrument, called the "Ophthalmo-Diaphanoscope," has been invented to illuminate the retina, and the back of the eye from behind, whereas the ophthalmoscope operates only from in front.

The new instrument is a remarkable example of the way in which electricity can be made to reveal the inner structure of the human body. It is not, however, an application of the X-ray, but it utilizes the translucency of the inner membranes to a powerful light.

It consists of an electric lamp enclosed in a tube, and supplied with a current which produces an illumination equal to that of eighty candles concentrated at a point. It blazes like a veritable star, and when held by a patient in his mouth, and close to the roof of the buccal cavity, its light streams through upon the retina and reveals to the physician everything that the back part of the eye contains.

In order to concentrate the effect of the illumination, and avoid the blinding glare from around the eyes, the patient wears a black mask, giving him a truly malevolent appearance, of which he himself, of course, is unaware.

The operator peers into the flaming eyeballs, and sees any defect which may exist there.

It has long been possible to save humanity from many sources of blindness which were formerly regarded as hopeless, and this new invention gives promise of further advance in that direction.

In fact, there are now comparatively few troubles of the eye that cannot be effectively dealt with.

As long as the nerves of vision are not destroyed, it is almost possible to make an artificial eye that will see nearly as well as the natural organ.

The New Method of Looking Into the Back of the Eye.

Spring Flowers

By JOHN CLARE

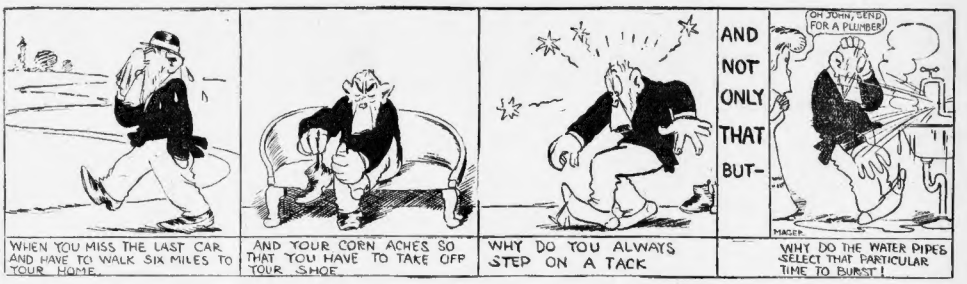

BOWING adorer of the gale,
Ye cowslips delicately pale,
Upraise your lorded plume,
Unfold your cups in splendor; speak!
Who decked you with that ruddy streak,
And gilt your golden gems?

Violets, sweet tenants of the glade,
In purple's richest pride arrayed,
Your errand here fulfil!
Go, tell the artist's simple stain
Your lustre imitate, in vain,
And match your Maker's skill.

Daisies, ye flowers of lowly birth,
Embroiderers of the carpet earth,
That send the velvet sod,
Open to Spring's refreshing air—
Its sweetest smiling bloom declare
Your Maker and my God.
